BANDITS GET CHURCH COLLECTION

KING GEORGE STILL IMPROVES; NATION OBSERVES HOLIDAY

Prince Appeals For Fund To Assist Idle Miners.

LONDON, Dec. 26.—King George today held the improvement which permitted his half-billion subjects to celebrate Christmas with the customary spirit.

Early today officials at Buckingham Palace told the United Press that there had been no change during the night in the improvement noted in the bulletin issued yesterday.

That bulletin said:

"The king passed a pleasant day. The local condition is improving and the strength is maintained. The next bulletin will be issued Wednesday evening."

The British empire had expected a Christmas present from the king's physicians in the form of an official indication that the king was definitely on the mend for the better. Although the doctors did not indicate this, the news that there was some improvement in the king's condition was considered good news and the entire holiday was celebrated with good spirit.

All the members of the royal family went to the king's sickroom early yesterday and exchanged presents with the monarch. Queen Mary presented the king with a rare Chinese vase, while the Prince of Wales gave his father a carved mahogany smoking stand.

The only dark spot over the holidays has been the distressing plight of the Welsh miners, thrown out of work by the closing of many mines in Wales.

The Prince of Wales broadcast an appeal last night on behalf of the fund of the Lord Mayor of London for the miners.

"I do not want to appear to be a wet blanket on Christmas night," the prince said, "but there are 250,000 miners who have been out of work for months and three times this number of women and children who are dependent on them."

"The only trade they know is slipping away from them and the spectre of want is drawing closer until finally they face, helplessly, distress and starvation."

"The greatest service anyone can render at present is to find employment for as many as possible."

The prince concluded his appeal with a request that funds be contributed immediately to provide necessities while positions are being found for those out of work.

The protocol was drafted late yesterday after receipt of Bolivia's favorable answer to a number of questions submitted by the special mediation committee concerning a basis of settlement of the latest boundary trouble. Paraguay's reply likewise was favorable.

A statement issued by conference officials said both governments had agreed on all basic points needed to reach a settlement of the dispute.

IRVING BERLIN INFANT DIES SUDDENLY

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—The baby boy credited with healing the father-daughter breach in one of America's most talked-of romances, is dead here.

Without warning 24-day-old Irving Berlin, Jr., died of a heart attack early yesterday before a horrified young nurse, as his songwriter father and mother, the former Ellin Mackay, slept.

Mourning replaced the anticipated celebration around the Berlin's Christmas tree.

Few callers were received, but among them was Clarence Mackay, president of the Postal Telegraph Company, the father who practically disowned Ellin Mackay when she was married to the Jewish Berlin a few years ago.

The coldness between Mackay and the Berlin was only recently dissipated. Father and daughter, for the first time since the romance, met at the funeral of Mrs. Marie Hungerford Mackay, Ellin's grandmother, last September.

But it was not until the baby, Irving Berlin, Jr., was born that the stern financier took cognizance of his son-in-law. There was something of a "reunion" when the trio met at the hospital.

Yesterday's death produced a common grief and further cemented the friendship.

SANTA CLAUS VISITS XENIA AND YOUNG AND OLD MADE HAPPY

Santa Claus, President of Christmas Cheer Inc., organized in Xenia under charter of December 25, 1928.

It had to come. The job was getting too big for one jovial, rotund man, and he was afraid that he would miss some chimneys.

So Santa this year was a captain of industry, operating in every home in the city and in institutions as well, and so far the Sherman anti-trust law hasn't got him.

Sleighs were too slow. Anyway there wasn't any snow.

However, instead of depending entirely upon his own efforts, Santa this year enlisted the aid of various organizations and many individuals in his gigantic Christmas cheer enterprise.

Like all great magnates, Santa was not seen by his workers, but his spirit presided over the entire project.

Fifteen hundred pounds of turkey headed a typical Christmas dinner at the O. S. and S. O. Home at noon. The remainder of the day the children spent as they liked, enjoying their gifts and visits from relatives and friends. Christmas night they witnessed the movie, "Dress Parade."

Christmas morning about fifty young carolers marched through the grounds at dawn singing carols and awakening the more than 600 children to the realization of their brightest day of the year was at hand.

After breakfast, gifts annually provided by the twelve state patriotic organizations which play Santa Claus to the youngsters, were distributed. Inasmuch as each child this year had filled out a blank making known his individual preference in the way of a Christmas gift, practically every child found his wish gratified. There were also many personal gifts, money donations from organizations, cottage gifts, gifts to the library and to the Home itself. The cottage gifts included radio sets, phonographs and other luxuries.

The Yuletide gaiety began last Thursday afternoon and every night of the holiday period a motion picture show was presented for the children in the high school auditorium. Sunday night the children presented a Christmas program and Monday evening they gave a cantata for visiting members of the Ex-Pupils' Association.

FAKE "PENITENTS" COMPEL PRIESTS TO GIVE UP OFFERINGS

Loot Amounts To $4,000 At Chicago Polish Church

CHICAGO, Dec. 26.—Four bandits who imposed upon the Christian charity of two priests and robbed Chicago's largest Polish Catholic Church of Christmas and Sunday offerings totaling $4,000 were hunted throughout the metropolitan area today.

The bandits gained entrance to St. Casimir's Church by telling Father E. S. Krakowski that they were penitent drunkards wanting to take the pledge of abstinence.

How far they might have gone with that pose is not known because when the priest asked if they could not wait until after the holiday rush, one of them shouted:

"Wait, hell! we don't want your pledge. We want the Christmas collection."

While Fathers Krakowski and Adelbert Furman fingered their rosaries in confusion, the bandits drew guns and forced them into the room where the church safe stood.

With a pistol behind each ear, Father Furman spun the dial and opened the safe.

The bandits then carried out nine canvas bags of silver and currency, leaving the two priests facing the wall with their hands raised above their heads.

When the bandits had gone the churchmen found that their telephone wires had been cut, giving the robbers a fifteen minute start ahead of the police alarm.

HOOVER PARTY WILL RETURN TO CAPITAL AS PLANS CHANGED

Florida Vacation Is Abandoned For The Present

ABOARD THE U. S. S. UTAH, Dec. 26.—Pressure of home affairs and the necessity of conferring with Republican leaders as soon as possible, have prompted President-elect Herbert Hoover to forego an immediate visit to Florida. The Utah will anchor off Hampton Roads, Va., January 6, and the Hoover party will proceed immediately to Washington.

It had previously been planned to have the party disembark in Florida, where Mr. Hoover had planned to select his cabinet and lay plans for the work of his coming administration. Under the new plan, however, the president-elect will go directly to Washington, to meet party leaders and government officials.

Announcement of the change in plans was received at the conclusion of the Christmas celebrations aboard the Utah. The final festivities included a dinner on the deck of the vessel.

The president-elect made a brief address at the dinner, thanking the American navy and the press correspondents who accompanied the party for their co-operation.

Captain C. R. Train of the Utah paid tribute to the fact that the kindness of the Hoover party had given a home-like touch to the Christmas this year for the officers and crew of the ship. He then presented Mr. Hoover with a pair of binoculars and Mrs. Hoover with a Spanish shawl—a gift from the personnel of the vessel.

Hundreds of messages flooded over the wireless of the Utah during yesterday. Among them was a message of greetings from President Hipolito Yrigoyen of Argentina, who entertained Mr. Hoover at Buenos Aires.

SEVEN INJURED WHEN FLAMES TRAP GUESTS RUSHING TO SAFETY

Spontaneous Combustion In Rubbish In Basement Blamed for Christmas Day Holocaust; Victims Overcome By Smoke.

AKRON, O., Dec. 26.—Spontaneous combustion was assigned today as the cause of the fire which swept a section of the Park Hotel here yesterday, taking a toll of six dead and seven injured.

Five of the victims were trapped on the third floor and suffocated. The sixth, a man, was caught on the second floor and overcome.

The blaze originated in a pile of rubbish, according to fire department officials. Seventy-five other guests, on the first and second floors, managed to reach the street although seven were partially overcome.

Dense clouds of smoke penetrated the building and all those killed died in the corridors while they were trying to reach the stairway. The building was not equipped with outside fire escapes.

Those killed were: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Alexander, Charles King, 28; W. W. Wilson, 28 of Plain City, O.; Clark Burrell, 44, and Lucian G. Curtis, 20. Fire Chief John Metz reached the conclusion that spontaneous combustion caused the blaze. The fire had been burning for some time before an alarm was turned in, he said.

An official investigation will be conducted today by Metz and the state fire marshal.

Those injured or partially overcome were: Paul Locklair, 49; A. C. Bruce, 26, Raymond Summers, 22; James Hamilton, 42; H. V. Curren, 23, and Ralph Smith, 25.

Locklair was burned seriously. The blaze started in the room adjoining the boiler compartment. It spread rapidly through the wooden partitions and into the clothes chute.

In a short time the rear of the first floor was enveloped in flames. The building soon filled with smoke and the lights were extinguished.

Guests on the first and second floors were awakened and with one exception they all struggled to safety through the smoke-choked hallways.

Mrs. Charles T. Barker, wife of the hotel manager, was aroused and she called her husband. A man playing cards in an adjoining building turned in the fire alarm while Barker was fighting to reach a telephone.

Barker finally was forced to lower himself through a window. He then helped his wife escape. Firemen fought valiantly to reach the trapped guests and near by residents braved death to aid in the rescue.

Within a few minutes the fire was under control but the lives of the trapped victims were still imperiled by the suffocating fumes. Some of the guests in the outside rooms on the first floor jumped to safety.

Those trapped in the inside rooms, looking out into a narrow court, tried to fight their way through the smoke blanket, and some reached safety unaided, but many were overcome and collapsed in the corridors.

Rescuers entering the building stumbled over inert bodies and dragged them to the exits.

Dozens of others in their night clothes were carried down ladders by firemen.

From one of the third story windows, a man and his wife were carried to safety by firemen and

NEW YORK ENJOYS PLACID HOLIDAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—New York has had what many old residents consider its most placid Christmas.

The fire department and the police force spent the day eating turkey, playing checkers and doing little fire fighting or arresting.

The alcoholic ward at Bellevue Hospital had a comparatively quiet day for a holiday. Liquor was responsible for four more deaths in the city yesterday bringing the total for the holiday season to nine. Seventy-two persons died as the result of drinking liquor in December, 1928.

Yesterday was the warmest Christmas New York has had since 1915. The minimum temperature was thirty-two degrees.

Fifteen other firemen were slightly injured while fighting the flames. The dead firemen were Adolph Sonnet, 30, and Joseph Deterro.

CONGRESS WILL TRY TO OBTAIN ACTION ON FARM QUESTION

Leaders In Sympathy With Request Of President

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26.—A serious effort to get some action on farm relief legislation will be made in both houses of congress after the Christmas holidays by a group of leaders in sympathy with President Coolidge's desire to handle the farm problem before he leaves office.

A majority of the farm bloc appears not to be in sympathy with the project and it is doubtful whether it can be carried out but the group favoring such a course is offering special inducements to bloc members.

The chief objection of the bloc is that it does not want Mr. Coolidge to appoint members of the Federal Farm Board which would be created under any farm relief plan. Its members would rather wait, and let President-elect Hoover do the appointing after his inauguration. Then too they believe Hoover would sign a more liberal farm bill than the present chief executive.

Against these objections Mr. Coolidge's friends have given private assurances that he will sign any bill that measures fully up to the farm relief program laid down in the Republican platform adopted at the Kansas City convention. They even suggest he might be persuaded to consult and abide by Hoover's judgment in his selection of the farm board.

Those who are working on this scheme in congress hope by summation of some such idea to thwart the plan for an extra session of congress. They believe tariff revision can wait until next December or at least until a special session late in the fall.

HOOVER PARTY WILL RETURN TO CAPITAL AS PLANS CHANGED

ABOARD THE U. S. S. UTAH, Dec. 26.—Pressure of home affairs and the necessity of conferring with Republican leaders as soon as possible, have prompted President-elect Herbert Hoover to forego an immediate visit to Florida. The Utah will anchor off Hampton Roads, Va., January 6 and the Hoover party will proceed immediately to Washington.

It had previously been planned to have the party disembark in Florida, where Mr. Hoover had planned to select his cabinet and lay plans for the work of his coming administration. Under the new plan, however, the president-elect will go directly to Washington, to meet party leaders and government officials.

Announcement of the change in plans was received at the conclusion of the Christmas celebrations aboard the Utah. The final festivities included a dinner on the deck of the vessel.

The president-elect made a brief address at the dinner, thanking the American navy and the press correspondents who accompanied the trip for their co-operation.

Captain C. R. Train of the Utah paid tribute to the fact that the kindness of the Hoover party had given a home-like touch to the Christmas year for the officers and crew of the ship. He then presented Mr. Hoover with a pair of binoculars and Mrs. Hoover with a Spanish shawl—a gift from the personnel of the vessel.

Hundreds of messages flooded over the wireless of the Utah during yesterday. Among them was a message of greetings from President Hipolito Irigoyen of Argentina, who entertained Mr. Hoover at Buenos Aires.

SEVEN INJURED WHEN FLAMES TRAP GUESTS RUSHING TO SAFETY

Spontaneous Combustion In Rubbish In Basement Blamed for Christmas Day Holocaust; Victims Overcome By Smoke.

AKRON, O., Dec. 26.—Spontaneous combustion was assigned today as the cause of the fire which swept a section of the Park Hotel here yesterday, taking a toll of six dead and seven injured.

Five of the victims were trapped on the third floor and suffocated. The sixth, a man, was caught on the second floor and overcome.

The blaze originated in a pile of rubbish, according to fire department officials. Seventy-five other guests, on the first and second floors, managed to reach the street although seven were partially overcome.

Dense clouds of smoke penetrated the building and all those killed died in the corridors while they were trying to reach the stairway. The building was not equipped with outside fire escapes.

Those killed were: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Alexander, Charles King, 28; W. W. Wilson, 28 of Plain City, O.; Clark Burrell, 44, and Lucian G. Curtis, 20. Fire Chief John Metz reached the conclusion that spontaneous combustion caused the blaze. The fire had been burning for some time before an alarm was turned in, he said.

An official investigation will be conducted today by Metz and the state fire marshal. Those injured or partially overcome were: Paul Locklair, 49; A. C. Bruce, 26; Raymond Summers, 22; Jess Hamilton, 42; H. W. Curran, 23, and Ralph Smith, 25.

Locklair was burned seriously. The blaze started in the room adjoining the boiler compartment. It spread rapidly through the wooden partitions and into the clothes chute.

In a short time the rear of the first floor was enveloped in flames. The building soon filled with smoke and the lights were extinguished.

Guests on the first and second floors were awakened and with one exception they all struggled to safety through the smoke-choked hallways.

Mrs. Charles T. Barker, wife of the hotel manager was aroused and she called her husband. A man playing cards in an adjoining building turned in the fire alarm while Barker was fighting to reach a telephone.

Barker finally was forced to lower himself through a window. He then helped his wife escape. Firemen fought valiantly to reach the trapped guests and nearby residents braved death to aid in the rescue.

Within a few minutes the fire was under control but the lives of the trapped victims were still imperiled by the suffocating fumes. Some of the guests in the outside rooms on the first floor jumped to safety.

Those trapped in the inside rooms, looking out into a narrow court, tried to fight their way through the smoke blanket, and some reached safety unaided, but many were overcome and collapsed in the corridors.

Rescuers entering the building stumbled over inert bodies and dragged them to the exits.

NEW YORK ENJOYS PLACID HOLIDAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—New York has had what many old residents consider its most placid Christmas. The fire department and the police force spent the day eating turkey, playing checkers and doing little fire fighting or arresting.

The alcoholic ward at Bellevue Hospital had a comparatively quiet day for a holiday. Liquor was responsible for four more deaths in the city yesterday bringing the total for the holiday season to nine. Seventy-two persons died as the result of drinking liquor in December, 1926.

Yesterday was the warmest Christmas New York has had since 1915. The minimum temperature was thirty-two degrees.

PNEUMONIA ATTACKS STRICKEN CHILD

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 26.—Eighteen months old Frank Brooks, who is near death with a toy motorcycle lodged in his throat, has been stricken by pneumonia. It was learned today.

Today marked the twelfth day since the toy lodged in his throat. Physicians attempted an operation but were forced to wait when his condition became too weak.

Frankie is from Asco, W. Va., near Bluefield.

UNUSUAL WEATHER GREET'S CHRISTMAS

Among those human beings to whom the adversities of life seemed almost unbearable Christmas Day, were those youngsters who received sleds and ice skates from a benevolent Santa Claus.

None could find any use whatever for a sled or ice skates Tuesday and from all indications these gifts may be classed with certain anonymous contributions received by other members of the family for which there is apparently no earthly use.

In fact, if weather observers expect to maintain their reputations for veracity, gifts of umbrellas, slickers and galoshes will be found to be more appropriate by the time Thursday rolls around. If the weather man is to be believed there will be rain Thursday following the weather of the last few days.

Children who received roller skates, bicycles and other outdoor toys found the day ideal for trying out the new possessions.

Druggist Gave Her Very Good Advice

Miss Ruth Horowitz, Bronx, N. Y., writes: "Having been troubled with indigestion caused by constipation for several months, my druggist advised a purely vegetable laxative pill. I can safely say that since I am taking them, and only one each night, I feel like myself again and can eat most anything without fear of an attack."

These debaters have proved several important questions: (1) That life imprisonment should not be substituted for capital punishment. (2) That a substantial increase in armies and navies would not prevent international war. (3) That the school board should not furnish free text books to all pupils. (4) That great ambitions have not wrought more harm than good to mankind in all ages. (5) That the number of subjects taught in high school and required for graduation should be decreased. (6) That the giving of Christmas presents is desirable.

CHAPEL PROGRAMS
Chapel on December 3 was in charge of Miss Cooper, first grade teacher. She secured Rev. Pleasant of South Solon as our speaker.

Rev. Owen Smith, who has been conducting revival services at Grape Grove spoke to us on December 10. The seniors had charge of this chapel service.

The junior high presented an excellent program on December 17. Songs and readings by members of the room were much enjoyed. A dialogue, "Served Him Right," was cleverly presented by Elizabeth Morris, Charles Brickle and Leroy Bolen.

EX-JUDGE DIES

MARTIN D. DICK, 78, former Probate Judge Thomas M. Baskirk, 78, died at his home here Christmas day.

KILLED IN CRASH
TOLEDO, O., Dec. 26.—Millard J. Deleite, 30, Columbus, was injured fatally Tuesday when a car in which he was riding with two other men collided with another machine near here.

TEN WITNESSES TO BE SUBPOENAED IN MURDER CASE HERE

Ten witnesses for the state have been ordered subpoenaed by Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall for the first degree murder trial of Gilbert Cooper, 49, farmer, near Cedarville, slayer of Caleb Hitchcock, 36, Cedarville, scheduled to begin January 2 in Common Pleas Court.

Witnesses to be subpoenaed are Sheriff Olmer Tate, Deputy Sheriff George Sugen, O. H. Carnwell, county road patrolman, Wilbur Hitchcock, father of the slain youth; George Wheeler, Xenia photographer; Coroner Frank M. Chambers, Dr. M. I. Marsh, Cedarville; Hayes A. McLean, marshal of Cedarville; Curry McElroy, Cedarville, and Alva Leach, living on the Nagley farm near Cedarville.

Cooper is expected to plead that he shot in self defense and that he fired impulsively rather than with premeditation, when Hitchcock advanced toward him during an argument over some traps set out by the Hitchcocks along Massey Creek on the Jesse Townsley farm. The shooting occurred November 24.

KILLED BY AUTO

PORTSMOUTH, Dec. 26.—Marion Penrod, 57, died here yesterday from injuries received when he was hit by an automobile Christmas eve.

POST MORTEM ON ELECTION

Disregarding the personalities of the two principle candidates in the recent presidential election Walter Lippmann, editorial chief of the Democratic New York World says that it was inevitable that the Republican party should win. Writing a post mortem of the election in "Vanity Fair" this leading Democratic writer points to the revolution that has brought about an acceptance of Big Business by the people.

"I am inclined to think that when it is seen in the perspective of history it will be recognized that in these years through which we are living, a technical and financial revolution in the conduct of business provided a solution for those class conflicts which determined so much of the political debate of the Nineteenth and of the first two decades of the Twentieth Century," he says. "At any rate, whether this revolution is permanent or temporary, it has been sufficient to dissolve political progressivism as we used to know it in this country, and to give a wholly new content of meaning to the claim of the Republicans that they are the guardians of prosperity."

"Big business in America," continues Mr. Lippmann, "for the time being at least is no longer pictured in the popular mind as a grasping and greedy octopus. It has come to signify automobiles, radios, electric refrigerators and a thousand other popularly available luxuries. This industrial revolution would, I believe, have taken place no matter which party was in power. In fact it was well started while Woodrow Wilson was President. But it is the fact, nevertheless, that it has yielded its results under Republican auspices, and the conviction has fixed itself in the American mind that even better things are to come."

MAY NOT BE LIARS AFTER ALL

Colonel Stewart stands acquitted of perjury, and one more attempt to jail somebody in connection with the oil investigation falls through.

The verdict was not particularly surprising, in view of the fact that the judge instructed the jurors that they must acquit Colonel Stewart if they found that a quorum of the Senate committee had not been physically present when he was questioned. Since it was admitted that several senators had been counted present when they were actually some distance away, the jurors could do but one thing—acquit him.

There are a lot of comments that might be made. Here, for instance, is a quip from Edward Hope, columnist for the New York Herald-Tribune.

"We know a lot of people we used to consider liars, but now we shall have to revise our opinion until we can remember whether there was always a quorum present."

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE PEOPLE GO ON

Carl Sandburg, writing in the Chicago News, tells of the Lincoln-Douglas debates. One of those great events was recently re-enacted at Knox college at Galesburg, Ill. Says Sandburg, biographer of Lincoln: "Three great actors or human forces took part in the Lincoln-Douglas debates. The orators, Lincoln and Douglas, were two of the actors in the drama. The third was the people. They came in the cold and almost frozen rain of a raw October day to stand and listen three hours to the speakers of the day. That crowd of 20,000 people was an instrument, a factor in history, that the mind and tongues of the orators tried to control and direct. In seven years both of the great orators were dead. But the people go on and on. Perhaps a thousand years from now there will be a millennial celebration of the event of seventy years ago on this spot. The very words of all great orators testify and cry that while the tongues of orators turn to dust the people go on and on."

SHAPING MINDS

In the above paragraph Carl Sandburg says the people go on although the tongues of orators turn to dust. The people do go on and the manner of their going is determined in part by the spoken and the written word. People seem so bent on their pleasures, so intent upon having their own way that we sometimes think they are uninfluenced. But they are deeply influenced, more than we know. We are influenced beyond what we ever admit. We listen and sometimes heed little, but the impression is left.

FROM WEEKS TO HOURS

There is much talk about the speed with which one can go from coast to coast across the American continent. Schedules between New York and Chicago come in for much discussion. More interesting, however, is the change in schedules which can be brought about in Central American countries. In Mexico, Central America and the Panama country it sometimes takes weeks to go a few hundred miles. Journeys which take two weeks may soon be cut to twenty hours. There are other countries where the airplane means more than in the United States.

THE CHICAGO FAIR

The Chicago World's Fair of 1893 was probably the outstanding event for education, industry and entertainment since the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876. There have been other world's fairs, but somehow the big Chicago show seems to stand out as foremost in the last 35 years. Now Chicago is planning another exposition on grand lines. But the city has some inside preparation to make before she can invite the world. It is known for its racketeering and organized crime. Perhaps it is no worse in proportion than many other cities. Unfortunately many people think so. What Chicago needs is two campaigns: one to rid the city of racketeering and another to tell the world it is done.

INSTRUCTION

It was said by a thoughtful person a long time ago that public instruction should be the first object of government. No matter what his personal behavior might be, the man or woman who has no curiosity about the way in which his government is operated can hardly be called a good citizen.

Kellygrams

One of the big oil companies with gasoline filling stations in various cities has discovered that it can sell more gas on the right-hand side of a leading highway as you go FROM a city. In most places, if filling stations are on opposite sides of a street, the one on the right-hand out-going side may be expected to do better twice as much business as the other—so I am assured by the manager of a chain of these stations.

The reason is simple! Automobile owners naturally do most of their driving in early forenoon and late afternoon. They would buy gasoline either on the way to their places of business or on their return trip homeward. But they don't stop to buy in the morning because they're in too big a hurry. Most people oversleep, have to eat a hasty breakfast and proceed as rapidly as possible to their offices, arriving just in the nick of time. Not having bought gasoline in the morning and knowing that they may be driving after dinner, they prefer a station on the same side of the street.

Because of this human habit of putting things off, and not buying in the morning what can be delayed until afternoon, more

SPEAKING OF HEAD WORK

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — By common agreement, farm relief and a tariff boost are the two most urgent things for congress to attend to—right now this winter—and the sooner the better, at that.

Accordingly, the present congress is not going to attend to them—which is congress' way. This congress is going to pass the farm and tariff questions along to the next congress to attend to—presumably at an extension session, next spring or fall or at next winter's regular session, if President Hoover can get out of calling an extra one, which undoubtedly he would like to do, but probably will find he cannot.

Wouldst know the reason for delay? Well, it's no mystery.

The agriculture folk themselves are responsible for tying up their part of the program. All relief schemes suggested include the creation of a federal farm board. President Coolidge would appoint this board's members, if it were to be created before March 4. With few exceptions, agriculture's friends believe that pretty much any relief plan, in the hands of such a set of administrators as Calvin might be expected to choose, must fail.

In the farm lawmakers' opinion, their crowd will fare best by waiting for President Hoover to even though it does take an extra few months.

The higher tariff folk also think they will gain time by resisting the temptation to make undue haste.

The fact is they are afraid they cannot get the boost they want—all along the line—from the present (70th) congress. Senator Capper of Kansas said something the other day that made the blood run cold. The farm lawmakers, quoth the Kansan, intend to vote, not for higher duties on everything, but actually for lower ones on products that they deem over-protected now.

The higher tariff-folks hold that there is no such thing as over-protection. Yet that threat of Caper's warned them that there are others who hold differently—perhaps enough, in this winter's congress, to blast the higher tariff-folks' hopes.

However, the higher tariff-folks made some gains in the last election—but they will not count until the new (71st) congress comes in.

So it looks to the tariff boosters like the part of wisdom to wait, too.

From all this it will be seen that there still is friction between agriculture industry and westerners—despite the fact that they voted about alike last November.

The industries consider "protection"—if you have enough of it—a sure cure for any and all ills, because they have found it so—for them.

The farmers are beginning to doubt if it quite fits their case.

Dynamite lurks in this conflict of opinions.

To be sure, the industries want the farmers to make more money. The more they make, the more the industries can wring out of them, for themselves. But they draw the line on any system which might permit the farmers to wring anything out of the industries in turn.

At least, the farmers see it so—and accuse the industries of hogishness. The industries regard that the farmers' ideas are "economically unsound."

From such acorns of discord, tall oaks of party trouble sometimes grow.

The 70th congress cares to cultivate no acorns that can be wished onto the 71st to be responsible for.

This menu was planned for a family of eight. Eggs or bacon added to the breakfast menu will make it a heartier for breakfast. Whole wheat toast and marmalade is excellent, too.

Today's Recipes.

Carrots, Celery and Onion — Cook in slightly salted water equal parts of celery, carrots and onion cut in very small pieces. Use just enough water for cooking so that vegetables will not have to be drained. When thoroughly cooked add a little cream.

Ginger Ale Jelly — Soak one-half box of gelatin in one-half cup of cold water. Pour over three-fourths cup of boiling water and stir in three-fourths cup of sugar. Cool and add one and one-fourth cups of ginger ale, one-fourth cup of lemon juice, and one-fourth cup of orange juice. When just about set stir in fruit—orange and red cherries or pineapple and prunes cut in just medium size pieces. Serve in small molds.

Baked Pork Chops—Saute pork chops. Season. Cover with water and cook slowly for about 25 minutes.

Dressing—Take dry bread and put on just enough milk to moisten. Then press milk to until very near dry. Add finely chopped onion, salt, pepper, sage and one egg. Mix all together thoroughly and place on top of meat in baking dish. Bake in a moderate oven for about one and one-half hours. Baste dressing often.

Thousand Island Dressing. — One-half cup olive oil, the juice of one-half lemon, one teaspoon grated onion, three teaspoons chopped parsley, one-fourth teaspoon mustard, six olives, sliced, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one-half cup mayonnaise, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Put all ingredients into a jar, having first mixed the dry ingredients and dissolved them in the fruit juice. Cover jar tightly, using rubber between cover and jar and shake until the mixture is smooth. Set in refrigerator until time to serve. Shake mixture again before using.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

DRINK PLENTY OF FRESH MILK: IT IS MOST COMPLETE FOOD

Cultist Ideas

"I am troubled with arthritis, also catarrh. A doctor has told me that if I'll take an orange juice fast for five days, and then have a diet free of starches, sugars and fats, I can be cured of the ailments. He also claims I must give up milk, of which I am very fond (and drink a pint daily) for he says milk is mucus-forming and I cannot be cured of catarrh so long as I use mucus-forming foods. It seems to me that I recall reading an article by you in which you said there was no such thing as a mucus-forming food."

MRS. J.

That mucus-diet business, and orange juice fast, and the elimination of milk from the diet, sounds as though you had gotten hold of a cultist instead of a real doctor, Mrs. J. Had he given you a complete examination and laboratory tests of your blood and urine? I doubt it.

Yes, I said it before and will repeat: There is no such thing as a mucus-forming food. The mucus membranes are markedly affected by the wrong diet, especially one that is deficient in vitamins, but there is no special mucus-forming food. Milk is one of the most complete foods we know of, and it very rarely disagrees with any one.

Arthritis may be due to a number of things, among them an infection which has settled in the joints from infected teeth, tonsils, appendix, etc. Disturbances in the ductless glands, and occasionally a wrong diet, especially one that is too high in starches and sugars.

An orange juice fast for a few days is of great benefit to many, but a person should be absolutely sure there is no diabetes, because such a "fast" would give him too much sugar and may cause death. I advise you to ring up the County Medical society and get a list of qualified physicians who will give you a complete examination and scientific advice. We have an article on Chronic Inflammations and one on Colic, Catarrh, etc., which you may have.

I have just come across a letter which says: "Enclosed is ten cents for your pamphlet on reducing. Thank you."

"Yours truly,"

"Atlantic City Elec. Co. No name and no self-addressed stamped envelope! I am wondering if I address a letter to The Overweight Person in the Meter Dept. of the Atlantic City Electric Co., the right one will get it. Depends on how many overweight weighters there are employed, I suppose."

I think I will have to ask you to write again, Blank, not forgetting to sign your name and to enclose the self-addressed, stamped envelope. You can refer to the fact that the office has your 10 cents already yet.

Mrs. N.—If you are 25 pounds under weight, it is quite probable that you are on a deficient diet. You say you eat a great deal. That may be quite true, and still your diet be deficient.

Do you count your calories? You cannot know how much, or how little you eat unless you do so. And the probability is that you don't eat so much as you think.

Have an examination by a competent physician, and if there is no organic reason for your thinness, our article on gaining and reducing weight, and the article on Balanced Diet, will help you.

Tomorrow: Raynaud's Disease.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

AND ALSO A T. A. SAYS GIRL

In answer to a recent article in the column about sportsmanship, in connection with drinking, etc., a girl writes:

"Dear Virginia Lee: Recently I had the utmost pleasure in reading an article by you which certainly was after my own heart. It dealt with the matter of sportsmanship in regard to drink. I am a typically modern girl, and yet I have never yet to say I smoked or drank. I have the most enjoyable times at parties. I can not see why any girl should drink or smoke when she has no use for the 'rotten' stuff anyway, but such is the case. I know it from my friends. They have often said to me, 'I hate the blame stuff, but I would not dare show the people that I am a flat tire.'"

"If some of our modern girls who think of themselves as sports could overhear the males' idea of you the next morning you'd wish to goodness you had acted natural. Take it from one who has a popular brother who confides in a popular sister."

"By the way, Mrs. Lee, at a recent party I used that expression you advised your admirers to use, 'total abstainer.' When I said I was a 'T. A.' they all cheered me for being original. It was really not original on my part, as you are aware. I want to thank you for your handy suggestion."

As it excites me from drinking. Furthermore, it is against the laws by which we are pretending to live, and a 'traitor' is a thing to be scorned. ODDITY."

Thank you, dear. Such letters do me good and help other girls.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a boy in my teens and there is a certain girl whom I like very much and I am undecided as to what to give her for Christmas, or whether it would be proper to give her one. What would you do?"

Send her a nice box of candy or some flowers, Sonnie. I am sure she would like either, and you can't go wrong on them.

Dear Little Unhappy: You are 16 — a mangle age — have a good father and mother, a good home and plenty of friends, yet you are not happy. You "always" have a longing for something, you don't know what. It is a very common feeling for girls and boys of your age. Don't worry a bit about it. Doctors say there is no such thing as physical growing pains, but there are mental and spiritual ones, and you are at the age where they are worst. No one understands you and you cannot depend on yourself. You may be happy and miserable, sweet tempered and cross all in a moment, mayn't you? Just keep working and playing and helping others and in time you will "arrive."

Hopeful Kate: A boy his age who drinks a good deal is no fit friend for a little girl. If you saw him when he was drunk I should think you would feel like getting as far away as possible instead of loving him.

Dot: Your mother was the one to blame, and she should be the one to apologize. Why does she not write to your friend and say she is sorry she misunderstood? She might invite him to dinner—kill the fatted calf for him, so to speak.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

Little "Mr. Red Riding Hood"

"I don't suppose that you have ever been hunted and had to run for your life?"

Carrier Pigeon stopped short in his story and gazed inquiringly at the boy. Peter shook his head.

"No, thank goodness, I never have," said he. "What in the world I should ever do I don't know. Why, when I am frightened I can't move."

"Once when I was a little boy I ran away and stayed in the woods until it was dark. And on my way home I saw a great big woolly thing and thought it was a wolf. My how my heart beat! I tried to run but my feet acted just as if they were glued to the ground."

"The dark things crept nearer and nearer. I opened my mouth to scream for help, but something had happened to my voice and not a sound came."

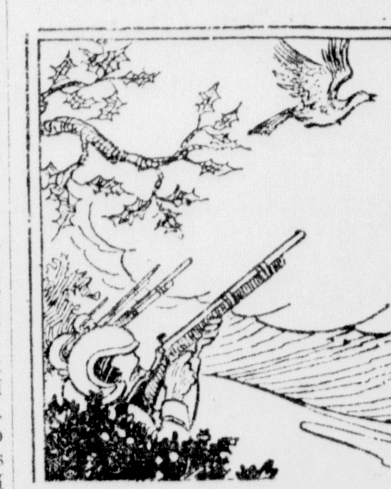

"By and by the great black thing was so close to me that I felt his breath upon my cheek. Now I am going to be eaten up just like little Red Riding Hood's grandma, thought I, but still I couldn't move a leg."

"Then a wet tongue licked my face and 'woof, woof' barked a voice and 'woof' barked a voice and 'woof' barked a voice."

It was only Jack, a neighbor's dog, and the best bearded dog in the world—as gentle as a kitten. I had my right for nothing, but I never ran away again. And even though it all turned out all right, Jack followed me to the kitchen door. I was happier to get home that night than ever I had been in my life before."

Carrier Pigeon listened to the boy and then, at his last word, he chuckled.

"After an adventure like that you have some idea of how I felt when he below me in the distance. I first saw the tops of the houses in which I knew our troops were quartered. I was not the only one who was glad, though. Almost as soon as I came into view a soldier caught sight of me. I heard him say afterward that he had looked through those black glasses so long that his eyes were almost popping out of his head and he had to shut and open them again before he could see me. It was I. He must have told the others. For after another the soldiers ran to greet me."

"When I arrived even the General himself, was there. I was so tired that all I wanted to do was to get the message to him and go to sleep. And without really thinking of what I was doing I alighted on the great general's shoulder."

"At any rate, whether this revolution is permanent or temporary, it has been sufficient to dissolve political progressivism as we used to know it in this country, and to give a wholly new content of meaning to the claim of the Republicans that they are the guardians of prosperity."

"Big business in America," continues Mr. Lippmann, "for the time being at least is no longer pictured in the popular mind as a grasping and greedy octopus. It has come to signify automobiles, radios, electric refrigerators and a thousand other popularly available luxuries. This industrial revolution would, I believe, have taken place no matter which party was in power. In fact it was well started while Woodrow Wilson was President. But it is the fact, nevertheless, that it has yielded its results under Republican auspices, and the conviction has fixed itself in the American mind that even better things are to come."

MAY NOT BE LIARS AFTER ALL

Colonel Stewart stands acquitted of perjury, and one more attempt to jail somebody in connection with the oil investigation falls through.

The verdict was not particularly surprising, in view of the fact that the judge instructed the jurors that they must acquit Colonel Stewart if they found that a quorum of the Senate committee had not been physically present when he was questioned. Since it was admitted that several senators had been counted present when they were actually some distance away, the jurors could do but one thing—acquit him.

There are a lot of comments that might be made. Here, for instance, is a quip from Edward Hope, columnist for the New York Herald-Tribune.

"We know a lot of people we used to consider liars, but now we shall have to revise our opinion until we can remember whether there was always a quorum present."

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE PEOPLE GO ON

Carl Sandburg, writing in the Chicago News, tells of the Lincoln-Douglas debates. One of those great events was recently re-enacted at Knox college at Galesburg, Ill. Says Sandburg, biographer of Lincoln: "Three great actors or human forces took part in the Lincoln-Douglas debates. The orators, Lincoln and Douglas, were two of the actors in the drama. The third was the people. They came in the cold and almost frozen rain of a raw October day to stand and listen three hours to the speakers of the day. That crowd of 20,000 people was an instrument, a factor in history, that the mind and tongues of the orators tried to control and direct. In seven years both of the great orators were dead. But the people go on and on. Perhaps a thousand years from now there will be a millennial celebration of the event of seventy years ago on this spot. The very words of all great orators testify and cry that while the tongues of orators turn to dust the people go on and on."

SHAPING MINDS

In the above paragraph Carl Sandburg says the people go on although the tongues of orators turn to dust. The people do go on and the manner of their going is determined in part by the spoken and the written word. People seem so bent on their pleasures, so intent upon having their own way that we sometimes think they are uninfluenced. But they are deeply influenced, more than we know. We are influenced beyond what we ever admit. We listen and sometimes heed little, but the impression is left.

FROM WEEKS TO HOURS

There is much talk about the speed with which one can go from coast to coast across the American continent. Schedules between New York and Chicago come in for much discussion. More interesting, however, is the change in schedules which can be brought about in Central American countries. In Mexico, Central America and the Panama country it sometimes takes weeks to go a few hundred miles. Journeys which take two weeks may soon be cut to twenty hours. There are other countries where the airplane means more than in the United States.

THE CHICAGO FAIR

The Chicago World's Fair of 1893 was probably the outstanding event for education, industry and entertainment since the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia in 1876. There have been other world's fairs, but somehow the big Chicago show seems to stand out as foremost in the last 35 years. Now Chicago is planning another exposition on grand lines. But the city has some inside preparation to make before she can invite the world. It is known for its racketeering and organized crime. Perhaps it is no worse in proportion than many other cities. Unfortunately many people think so. What Chicago needs is two campaigns: one to rid the city of racketeers and another to tell the world it is done.

INSTRUCTION

It was said by a thoughtful person a long time ago that public instruction should be the first object of government. No matter what his personal behavior might be, the man or woman who has no curiosity about the way in which his government is operated can hardly be called a good citizen.

Kellygrams

One of the big oil companies with gasoline filling stations in various cities has discovered that it can sell more gas on the right-hand side of a leading highway as you go FROM a city. In most places, if filling stations are on opposite sides of a street, the one on the right-hand out-going side may be expected to do perhaps twice as much business as the other—so I am assured by the manager of a chain of these stations.

The reason is simple! Automobile owners naturally do most of their driving in early forenoon and late afternoon. They would buy gasoline either on the way to their places of business or on the return trip home, but they don't stop to buy in the morning because they're in too big a hurry. Most people oversleep, have to eat a hasty breakfast and proceed as rapidly as possible to their offices, arriving just in the nick of time. Not having bought gasoline in the morning and knowing that they may be driving after dinner, they prefer a station on the same side of the street.

Because of this human habit of putting things off, and not buying in the morning what can be delayed until afternoon, more

SPEAKING OF HEAD WORK

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — By common agreement, farm relief and a tariff boost are the two most urgent things for congress to attend to—right now—this winter—and the sooner the better, at that.

Accordingly, the present congress is not going to attend to them—which is congress' way. This congress is going to pass the farm and tariff questions along to the next congress to attend to—presumably at an extra session, next spring or fall or at next winter's regular session, if President Hoover can get out of calling an extra one, which undoubtedly he would like to do, but probably will find he cannot.

Wouldn't you like the reason for delay? Well, it's no mystery.

The agriculture folk themselves are responsible for tying up their part of the program.

All relief schemes suggested include the creation of a federal farm board. President Coolidge would appoint this board's members, if it were to be created before March 4. With few exceptions, agriculture's friends believe that pretty much any relief plan, in the hands of such a set of administrators as Calvin might be expected to choose, must fail.

In the farm lawmakers' opinion, their crowd will fare best by waiting for President Hoover—even though it does take an extra few months.

The higher tariff folk also think they will gain time by resisting the temptation to make undue haste.

The fact is they are afraid they cannot get the boost they want—all along the line—from the present (70th) congress. Senator Capper of Kansas said something the other day that made the blood run cold. The farm lawmakers, quoth the Kansan, intend to vote, not for high-tar duties on everything, but actually for lower ones on products that they deem over-protected now.

The higher tariffites hold that there is no such thing as over-protection. Yet that threat of Capper's warned them that there are others who hold differently—perhaps enough, in this winter's congress, to blast the higher tariffites' hopes.

However, the higher tariffites made some gains in the last election—but they will not count until the new (71st) congress comes in.

So it looks to the tariff boosters like the part of wisdom to wait, too.

From all this it will be seen that there still is friction between eastern industry and western agriculture—despite the fact that they voted about alike last November.

The industries consider "protection"—if you have enough of it—a sure cure for any and all ills, because they have found it so—for them.

The farmers are beginning to doubt if it quite fits their case.

Dynamite lurks in this conflict of opinions.

To be sure, the industries want the farmers to make more money. The more they make, the more the industries can wring out of them, for themselves. But they draw the line on any system which might permit the farmers to wring anything out of the industries in turn.

At least, the farmers see it so—and accuse the industries of hoghishness. The industries rejoin that the farmers' ideas are "economically unsound."

Cream Coffee

LUNCHEON
Rice with Cheese Sauce
Graham Wafers Cocoa Fruit Salad

DINNER
Baked Pork Chops
Baked Potatoes Bran Rolls
Carrots, Celery and Onion
Head Lettuce with French Dressing (Seasoned with a Little catsup and onion)
Ginger Ale Jelly Cookies

This menu was planned for a family of eight. Eggs or bacon added to the breakfast menu will make it a bit heartier for those who need a heavier breakfast. Whole wheat toast and marmalade is excellent, too.

Today's Recipes.

Carrots, Celery and Onion — Cook in slightly salted water equal parts of celery, carrots and onion cut in very small pieces. Use just enough water for cooking so that vegetables will not have to be drained. When thoroughly cooked add a little cream—no thickening.

Ginger Ale Jelly — Soak one-half box of gelatin in one-half cup of cold water. Pour over three-fourths cup of boiling water and stir in three-fourths cup of sugar. Cool and add one and one-fourth cups of ginger ale, one-fourth cup of lemon juice, and one-fourth cup of orange juice. When just about set stir in fruit—orange and red cherries or pineapple and prunes cut in just medium size pieces. Serve Baked Pork Chops—Sauté pork chops. Season. Cover with water and cook slowly for about 25 minutes.

Dressing—Take dry bread and put on just enough milk to moisten. Then press milk out until very near dry. Add finely chopped onion, salt, pepper, sugar and one egg. Mix all together thoroughly and place on top of meat in baking dish. Bake in moderate oven for about one and one-half hours. Baste dressing often.

Thousand Island Dressing. One-half cup olive oil, the juice of one-half lemon, one teaspoon grated onion, three teaspoons chopped parsley, one-half teaspoon mustard, six olives, sliced, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, one-half cup mayonnaise, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Put all ingredients into a jar, having first mixed the dry ingredients and dissolved them in the fruit juice. Cover jar tightly, using rubber between cover and jar and shake until the mixture is smooth. Set in refrigerator until time to serve. Shake mixture again before using.

INDIGNATION
Senator Borah, discussing an unsatisfactory answer that had been made to a charge of corruption, smiled and said:

"It reminds me of the English butler. His employer said to him:

"'Heuston, I bet you've been at my Scotch.'"
"Hexcuse me, sir," said Heuston, in his haughty way. "Hexcuse me, but I don't bet."

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS M. D.
Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet For Children"

DRINK PLENTY OF FRESH MILK; IT IS MOST COMPLETE FOOD

Cultist Ideas
"I am troubled with arthritis, also catarrh. A doctor has told me that if I'll take an orange juice fast for five days, and then have a diet free of starches, sugars and fats, I can be cured of the ailments. He also claims I must stop up with which I must eat (and drink a pint daily) for he says milk is mucus-forming and I cannot be cured of catarrh so long as I use mucus-forming foods. It seems to me that I recall reading an article by you in which you said there was no such thing as a mucus-forming food."

That mucus-diet business, and orange juice fast, and the elimination of milk from the diet, sounds as though you had gotten hold of a cultist instead of a real doctor, Mrs. J. Had he given you a complete examination and laboratory tests of your blood and urine? I doubt it.
Yes, I said it before and will repeat: There is no such thing as a mucus-forming food. The mucus membranes are markedly affected by the wrong diet, especially one that is deficient in vitamins, but there is no special mucus-forming food. Milk is one of the most complete foods we know of, and it very rarely disagrees with any one.
Arthritis may be due to a number of things, among them an infection which has settled in the joints from infected teeth, tonsils, appendix, etc., disturbance in the ductless glands, and occasionally a wrong diet, especially one that is too high in starches and sugars.
An orange juice fast for a few days is of great benefit to many, but a person should be absolutely sure there is no diabetes, because such a "fast" would give him too much sugar and may cause death. I advise you to ring up the County Medical society and get a list of qualified physicians who will give you a complete examination and scientific advice. We have an article on Chronic Catarrh, etc., which you may have.

I have just come across a letter which says:
"Enclosed is ten cents for your pamphlet on reducing. Thank you."
"Yours truly,

"Atlantic City Elec. Co."

"Meter Dept."
No name and no self-addressed stamped envelope! I am wondering if I address a letter to The Overweight Person in the Meter Dept. of the Atlantic City Electric Co., the right one will get it? Depends on how many overweighters there are employed, I suppose.

I think I will have to ask you to write again, blank, not forgetting to sign your name and to enclose the self-addressed, stamped envelope. You can refer to the fact that the office has your 10 cents already yet.

Mrs. N.—If you are 25 pounds under weight, it is quite probable that you are on a deficient diet. You say you eat a great deal. That may be quite true, and still your diet be deficient. Do you count your calories? You cannot know how much or how little you eat unless you do so. And the probability is that you don't eat so much as you think.

Have an examination by a competent physician, and there is no organic reason for your thinness, our article on gaining and reducing weight, and the article on Balanced Diet, will help you.

Tomorrow: Raynaud's Disease.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

AND ALSO A T. A., SAYS GIRL

In answer to a recent article in the column about sportsmanship, in connection with drinking, etc., a girl writes:

"Dear Virginia Lee: Recently I had the utmost pleasure in reading an article by you which certainly was after my own heart. It dealt with the matter of sportsmanship in regard to drink. I am a typically modern girl, and yet I have never yet to say I smoked or drank. I have the most enjoyable times at parties. I cannot see why any girl should drink or smoke when she has no use for the 'rotten' stuff anyway, but such is the case. I know it from my friends. They have often said to me, 'I hate the blame stuff, but I would not dare show the people that I am a 'dry'.'"

"If I am a 'dry' girl," I am a girl who think yourselves sports could overhear the males' idea of you the next morning you'd wish to goodness you had acted natural. Take it from one who has a popular brother who confides in a popular sister.

"By the way, Mrs. Lee, at a recent party I used that expression you advised your admirers to use, 'total abstainer.' When I said I was a 'T. A.' they all cheered me for being original. It was really not original on my part, as you are aware. I want to thank you for your handy suggestion, as it excused me from drinking. Furthermore, it is against the laws by which we are pretending to live, and a 'traitor' is a thing to be scorned."

Thank you, dear. Such letters do me good and help other girls.

ODDITY.
"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a boy in my teens and there is a certain girl whom I like very much and I am undecided as to what to give her for Christmas, or whether it would be proper to give her one. What would you do?"

Send her a nice box of candy or some flowers, Sonnie. I am sure she would like either, and you can't go wrong on them.

Dear Little Unhappy: You are 16—magine age it have a good father and mother, a good home and plenty of friends. Yet you are not happy. You "always have a longing for something, you don't know what." It is a very common feeling for girls and boys of your age. Don't worry a bit about it. Doctors say there is no such thing as physical growing pains, but there is mental and spiritual ones, and you are at the age where they are worst. No one understands you and you cannot depend on yourself. You may be happy and miserable, sweet tempered and cross all in a moment, mayn't you? Just keep working and playing and helping others and in time you will "arrive."

Hopeful Kate: A boy his age who drinks a good deal is no fit friend for a little girl. If you saw him when he was drunk I should think you would feel like getting as far away as possible instead of loving him.

Peter's Adventure

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

Little "Mr. Red Riding Hood"
"I don't suppose that you have ever been hunted and had to run for your life!"

Carrier Pigeon stopped short in his story and gazed inquiringly at the boy. Peter shook his head.

"No, thank goodness, I never have," said he. "What in the world I should ever do I don't know. Why, when I am frightened I can't move."

"Once when I was a little boy I ran away and stayed in the woods until it was dark. And on my way home I saw a great big woolly thing and thought it was a wolf. My, how my heart did beat! How I wished I was home! I tried to run but my feet acted just as if they were glued to the ground."

"The dark things crept nearer and nearer. I opened my mouth to scream for help, but something had happened to my voice and not a sound came."

"By and by the great black thing was so close to me that I felt his breath upon my cheek. Now I am going to be eaten up just like little Red Riding Hood's grandma, thought I, but still I couldn't move a leg."

"Then a wet tongue licked my face and 'woof, woof' barked a voice right at my very ear. It was only Jack, a neighbor's dog, and the best hearted dog in the world—as gentle as a lamb. I had my fright for nothing, but I never ran away again. And even though it all turned out all right and Jack followed me to the kitchen door I was happier to get home that night than ever I had been in my life before."

Carrier Pigeon listened to the boy and then, at his last word, he chuckled.

"After an adventure like that you have some idea of how I felt when below me in the distance I first saw the tops of the houses in which I knew our troops were quartered. I was not the only one who was glad, though. Almost as soon as I came into view a soldier caught sight of me. I heard him say afterward that he had looked through those blessed glasses so long that his eyes were almost popping out of his head and he had to shut and open them again before he could see it was I. He must have told the others, for one after another the soldiers ran to greet me. "When I arrived over the General, himself, was there. I was so tired that all I wanted to do was to get the message to him and go to sleep. And I was doing really thinking of what I was doing I delighted on the great general's shoulder."

ANTIOCH SANITARY DISTRICT HAS BEEN DISSOLVED BY COURT

A resolution of the "Antioch Sanitary District," created in March, 1922 for the purpose of establishing a public water supply and a sewage disposal system in a territory in Yellow Springs, including Antioch College and the College Park subdivision, has been authorized in Common Pleas Court.

The district was created in order to prevent pollution of water and to establish sewers and sewage disposal systems, the district including 207.88 acres of land adjacent to the present college site besides twenty lots in Yellow Springs and the college subdivision.

The district was originally organized to supply the college with water. Recently the village of Yellow Springs acquired a new water supply north of the town and the college district, now deemed unnecessary to serve longer in its present capacity, will be abandoned. The college in the future will purchase its water from the village. It is believed this method will be more economical.

At the time the district was organized, between $3,000 and $4,000 was expended in equipment.

Although Yellow Springs officials approved the idea, the village did not enter into the plan for public water and sewage disposal at that time.

The water plant is located in the upper part of the glen, the supply of water coming from natural springs in the glen. It was piped from the water station to two large tanks of 15,000 gallons capacity each, located at the college. The sewage disposal plant is situated in the lower part of the glen and furnished service to all buildings in the area.

The director and secretary of the district, who petitioned for dissolution were ordered discharged from office by the court. All of the acts of the officers were approved by the court and their report and final account were also confirmed.

FARM FRAME HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE MONDAY AFTERNOON

A two-story, frame house on the farm of John Dellinger, on the Dayton and Xenia Pike, a mile east of Zimmerman, was entirely destroyed by fire with loss estimated at $5,000 shortly after noon Monday.

It is believed the blaze was caused by sparks from a fire igniting the shingle roof. The family was unaware of the fire until neighbors noticed the flames.

The flames were first discovered at 1 p. m. by James Hanes, living directly across the highway and Ed Ferguson, nearest neighbor, who with some men was working in the fields.

Neighbors rushed to the scene and succeeded in saving most of the household goods in the eight-room house.

The residence had a replacement value of about $5,000 and the loss is believed to be only partly covered by insurance.

Since there was no adequate means of fighting the flames, the volunteers worked to prevent the destruction of a building close by. The building was saved and the family will live there temporarily. The family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Dellinger and their daughter. The property was the old Frank McKean farm.

HELDMAN WILL FACE CHARGE OF MURDER

CANTON, O., Dec. 26.—Wilbur Heldman, Lorain furnace salesman, will be charged with murder today in connection with the death of his wife Margaret, the phantom gun woman who was shot to death after she admitted killing Bernard Fearn, Waco coal dealer.

Heldman has been held as a material witness since his wife's death. He claims she committed suicide, but authorities after an investigation, decided to let the county grand jury determine whether the story is true.

Heldman was bringing the gun girl from Lorain when she was killed. An hour previously she confessed the Fearn murder and admitted intimacies with him.

WOMAN INJURED AS AUTO OVERTURNS

Mrs. Anna Morton, E. Market St., had her right arm fractured and received serious bruises to her head when she lost control of her auto and the machine overturned on the Wright Road, off the Columbus Pike, east of Xenia, Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Morton was enroute to Cedarville with her brother, J. M. Stewart, to have Christmas dinner, when the accident occurred. Mr. Stewart was not hurt.

Mrs. Morton was taken to the McClellan Hospital where she received medical attention and was later taken home.

AUTOIST ARRESTED AFTER FIVE PEOPLE HURT IN ACCIDENT

Five persons were injured, not seriously, and Arthur Knox, Cincinnati, former Xenian, is at liberty under $1,000 bond facing arraignment on possibly four charges following a head-on collision between a coupe driven by Knox and a sedan driven by William Cash, a mile and one-half from the city, early Christmas morning.

Knox was arrested by Sheriff Ohmer Tate, who said the driver was in possession of three quarts of wine, one quart of gin, two pints of whiskey and a Colt .38 caliber pistol.

Knox appeared before R. O. Copey, Xenia Typ. justice of the peace, furnished $1,000 appearance bond and was released Sunday night. He waived his right to trial in another court and his hearing before the magistrate will take place Monday.

Knox, driving east, is alleged on the wrong side of the road, crashed head-on into an auto being driven toward Xenia by William Cash. Cash was driving Mrs. John Baber and her four children, Jackson Road, to this city, where the children expected to attend the Christmas party of the Xenia lodge of Elks Christmas morning.

Two of the four children, Sheriff Tate learned, were tossed through the windshield of the car and hurt. The eldest child, John, Jr., 12, was cut about the head and a 7-year old boy was bruised about the knees. Two other children, a boy and a girl, were not injured. Mrs. Lizzie Baber, their mother, suffered bruises and Cash was also bruised about the chest. They were brought to Xenia and treated by Dr. H. R. Hawkins.

Knox was bruised and a companion whose name authorities did not disclose, escaped unhurt.

Cash told Sheriff Tate he had swerved almost entirely off the improved part of the highway in a futile effort to avert an accident.

Knox faces possible charges of carrying concealed weapons, driving an auto while intoxicated, transporting liquor and reckless driving.

FARMER KILLS SELF CHRISTMAS NIGHT; WAS DESPONDENT

Wayne Jeffers, 45, farmer, shot and killed himself at his home three miles north of Wilmington Christmas night. Despondency because of two months' illness is ascribed by relatives as a motive for the act.

Jeffers and his wife had spent Christmas day visiting Mrs. Jeffers' relatives in Bowersville. Upon returning home, Jeffers failed to enter the house with his wife.

Becoming alarmed when he did not appear, she began a search for him and found him lying on top of a wagon load of corn fodder which had been drawn into the barn.

He shot himself with a shotgun, the charge penetrating his heart. Surviving besides his widow, Elizabeth, is a nine-months-old baby, one brother, I. J. Jeffers, assistant postmaster of Wilmington, his mother-in-law and father-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ott Tobin and his sister-in-law, Miss Frances Tobin, all of Bowersville. The widow was before marriage, Miss Elizabeth Tobin, who at one time taught school in Xenia.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. THOMAS M'CANN

Mrs. Thomas M'Cann, 47, died at a local hospital Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Mrs. M'Cann underwent a serious operation at the hospital three weeks ago, and never recuperated properly from the ordeal.

She was born in Xenia, and spent her entire life in this city. Besides her husband, who is conductor on the Dayton and Xenia traction line, two brothers, John Coates, Miami, O., and Harvey Coates and one sister, Mrs. Della Berry, this city, survive.

Mrs. M'Cann was a member of St. Bridget Catholic Church. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

QUIET CHRISTMAS FOR XENIA POLICE

Christmas passed quietly for police, according to Police Chief M. E. Graham, who announced that no arrests were made and few complaints were received. Christmas cheer was apparently lacking. Xenians did not have the usual "whoopie," and as a result the city was dryer than usual, the chief declared.

THE MEADOWLARKS—Helpful Hints for the Hopeless

Annual Sport Review-1928

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Sports Writer for Central Press

The opening of the major and minor league baseball seasons generally took the play away from all other sports in April, although tasty dishes were offered in half a dozen other branches of sport in the leap-year month.

Had the big league fans but known it the results of the opening games in both leagues furnished a true tip-off on what to expect for the season. The New York Yankees and Athletics drew the spotlight in the American League and the Yankees proceeded to rounce the man on whom Connie Mack was leaning to check the Huggins through the 1928 campaign—Lefty Grove. Huggins' crew won the opener, 8 to 3, this without the aid of any homers from the bats of Babe Ruth or Lou Gehrig.

The St. Louis Cardinals opened up with a 14 to 7 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. The boys could have called it a season right there, as far as the outcome was concerned. Such a procedure would have separated the moguls from the usual revenue, however.

Looming next in importance was the signing of Gene Tunney for another appearance as heavyweight champion—an appearance which was destined to be his last (considering his present retirement permanent). Tom Heene, rugged, a courageous fellow from New Zealand, was given the plum—mainly because of the possibilities for weaving color and romance about him—to fatten the gate.

Almost coincident with the selection of the date for the Tunney-Heene battle came the news that Jack Dempsey had scored a count knockout in his fight to prevent Jack Kearns, his former manager, from collecting $700,000 which Kearns asserted was due him for his managerial services over a three-year period despite the fact that the two Jacks had agreed to disagree.

While not seeking to detract from Dempsey's greatness as a fighter, the fair-minded section of the ring public has always felt that it was the split between the two Jacks that brought Dempsey to the end of the championship trail with such suddenness that night in Philadelphia. Not only was Kearns' astuteness as a manager sadly lacking in Dempsey's training camp and corner, but the former pilot heeled Dempsey with various court actions and well-timed verbal barrages.

Chronologically the events for the month ran as follows:
APRIL 5—Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, won the north and south women's golf tourney at Pinehurst, defeating the sensational Virginia Van Wie, 6 and 5.
APRIL 7—Richard named the Tunney-Heene fight date, which was later changed.

APRIL 11—Major league seasons opened with the main results those chronicled above.
APRIL 14—Johnny Layton regained his national three-cushion billiard title in a championship match in Chicago, defeating Willie Hoppe in the final match.
APRIL 15—The Nationals of New York won the national soccer title by defeating the Chicago Bricklayers, 3 to 0, at Chicago. The teams had played to a 1 to 1 tie the week previously in Cleveland, O., two overtime periods failing to bring a score by either team. The final game was marred by riots.

APRIL 20—Lefty Grove gave the Philadelphia Athletics new life when he tanned the N. Y. Yanks 2 to 1 in the opener at New York, allowing the team five hits and holding Ruth hitless and Gehrig to one single. The two old vets, Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb, clinched the game for the Mackmen with their timely hitting. Eppa Rixey, of the Cincinnati Reds, shut out the Chicago Cubs the same afternoon with four hits.
APRIL 21—Babe Walberg sent Athletic boosters into a frenzy of delight by shutting out the Yankees, 10 to 0, allowing six hits and collecting a homer and two singles himself. Vic Aldridge, recently traded to the Giants by the Pirates, was suspended by John McGraw for failure to come to terms. Had McGraw known how much help Aldridge was to prove to the team the Giant boss would have paid him to stay out in the cold.

APRIL 23—Pete Latzo, former welterweight champion, made his debut as a light heavyweight and defeated Tony Marullo in 10 rounds in a New York ring.
APRIL 24—Babe Ruth enjoyed his biggest day of the season, up to the date mentioned, by socking two home runs off Horace Lisenbee, of the Washington Senators, at New York. He had collected one in previous games.

APRIL 25—Frank Lockhart, international fame, was killed when a tire of his car exploded and hurled the machine into space as he was attempting to set a new world's speed record at Daytona Beach.

UNPRECEDENTED WAVE OF SPECULATION ACTIVITY NOTED

By ANDREW MELLON
Secretary of the Treasury
(Andrew William Mellon was born at Pittsburgh, Pa., March 24, 1855. He was educated at the Western University of Pennsylvania (now University of Pittsburgh). He was president of the Mellon National Bank at Pittsburgh, retiring in 1921 to accept the office of secretary of the treasury which he has since held. He is a director or officer of various financial and industrial corporations and has been engaged in development of coal, coke and iron enterprises. He is chairman of several federal boards.)
A physical volume of industrial production equivalent to that of the fiscal year 1927 together with an unprecedented wave of speculative activity, higher money rates and a decline in the country's stock of gold to about $500,000,000 stand out as the most important economic and financial developments of the last twelve-month period.

The department of the treasury has found it increasingly necessary to study business and financial conditions generally and the welfare of the federal government, since the government's revenues are now closely linked with the success of business through the policy of income taxation.
There now is an intimate connection between the treasury and the money market as a result of public debt operations of the government which require accurate analysis of the financial situations from time to time.

The federal reserve banks favored easier money during the summer and early fall of 1927, because it was believed easier money here would help the weak exchange rates and avoid the necessity of

CATHOLICS ATTEND EARLY MASSES HERE ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Worshippers filled St. Bridget Catholic Church at 5 o'clock Christmas morning for the first of four masses celebrating the birth of the Saviour.

The Rev. David Powers, pastor, was celebrant of the high mass, at which the alumni choir sang a special mass with solo parts taken by Miss Eleanor McDonnell. Preceding the mass the choir sang "Silent Night" and at the offertory, "Adeste Fideles." Miss McDonnell sang "With Glory Lift the Midnight Air" as the congregation retired from the church at the close of the service.

The Rev. Father Powers preached briefly on the gospel of the day which told the story of the birth of Christ in Bethlehem. Low masses were celebrated at 7 and at 8 o'clock and another high mass was sung at 9:30 o'clock Christmas morning, with the children's choir singing. Miss McDonnell, again the soloist, sang the solo "The Birthday of the King" at the 9:30 service.

INFLUENZA HURTS PHONE SERVICE

One third of the exchange operators of the Xenia branch of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. were confined to their homes by severe colds or grip Monday, according to H. W. Cleaver, commercial manager, who asks that patrons of the service exercise patience if there is any unusual delay in putting through phone calls for the next few days.

Mr. Cleaver announced that seven out of the twenty-two available operators failed to report Monday because of illness and that the number of girls on the sick list has been increasing daily.

Because of the limited number of operators Mr. Cleaver asks that phone users overlook any less of delay in putting through calls.

McCormick was accompanied by Robert Fox, Clarence Milburn and Loyd Jones, all of Xenia, at the time of the accident, but the other three men were not injured. McCormick is slowly recovering, according to word received here.

ANTIOCH SANITARY DISTRICT HAS BEEN DISSOLVED BY COURT

A resolution of the "Antioch Sanitary District," created in March, 1922 for the purpose of establishing a public water supply and a sewage disposal system in a territory in Yellow Springs, including Antioch College and the College Park subdivision, has been authorized in Common Pleas Court.

The district was created in order to prevent pollution of water and to establish sewers and sewage disposal systems, the district including 207.88 acres of land adjacent to the present college site besides twenty lots in Yellow Springs and the college subdivision.

The district was originally organized to supply the college with water. Recently the village of Yellow Springs acquired a new water supply north of the town and the college district, now deemed unnecessary to serve longer in its present capacity, will be abandoned. The college in the future will purchase its water from the village. It is believed this method will be more economical.

At the time the district was organized, between $3,000 and $4,000 was expended in equipment.

Although Yellow Springs officials approved the idea, the village did not enter into the plan for public water and sewage disposal at the time.

The water plant is located in the upper part of the glen, the supply of water coming from natural springs in the glen. It was piped from the water station to two large tanks of 15,000 gallons capacity each, located at the college. The sewage disposal plant is situated in the lower part of the glen and furnished service to all buildings in the area.

The director and secretary of the district, who petitioned for dissolution, were ordered discharged from office by the court. All of the acts of the officers were approved by the court and their report and final account were also confirmed.

FARM FRAME HOUSE DESTROYED BY FIRE MONDAY AFTERNOON

A two-story, frame house on the farm of John Dellinger, on the Dayton and Xenia Pike, a mile east of Zimmerman, was entirely destroyed by fire with loss estimated at $5,000 shortly after noon Monday.

It is believed the blaze was caused by sparks from a blue ironing the shingle roof. This family was unaware of the fire until neighbors noticed the flames.

The flames were first discovered at 1 p. m. by James Hanes, living directly across the highway and Ed Ferguson, nearest neighbor, who with some men were working in the fields.

Neighbors rushed to the scene and succeeded in saving most of the household goods in the eight-room house.

The residence had a replacement value of about $5,000 and the loss is believed to be only partly covered by insurance.

Since there was no adequate means of fighting the flames, the volunteers worked to prevent the destruction of a building close by. This building was saved and the family will live there temporarily.

The family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Dellinger and their daughter. The property was the old Frank McKean farm.

HELDMAN WILL FACE CHARGE OF MURDER

CANTON, O., Dec. 26.—Wilbur Heldman, local man, was charged with murder today in connection with the death of his wife Margaret, the phantom gun woman who was shot to death after she admitted killing Vernard Fearn, Waco coal dealer.

Heldman has been held as a material witness since his wife's death. He claims she committed suicide, but authorities after an investigation, decided to let the county grand jury determine whether the story is true.

Heldman was bringing the gun girl from Lorain when she was killed. An hour previously she confessed the Fearn murder and admitted intimacies with him.

WOMAN INJURED AS AUTO OVERTURNS

Mrs. Anna Morton, E. Market St., had her right arm fractured and received serious bruises to her leg when she lost control of her auto and the machine overturned on the Wright Road, off the Columbus Pike, east of Xenia, Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Morton was enroute to Cedarville with her brother, J. M. Stewart, to have Christmas dinner, when the accident occurred. Mrs. Stewart was not hurt.

Mrs. Morton was taken to the McClellan Hospital where she received medical attention and was later taken home.

AUTOIST ARRESTED AFTER FIVE PEOPLE HURT IN ACCIDENT

Five persons were injured, not seriously, and Arthur Knox, Cincinnati, former Xenian, is at liberty under $1,000 bond facing arraignment on possibly four charges following a head-on collision between a coupe driven by Knox and a sedan driven by William Cash, colored, on the Columbus Pike, a mile and one-half from the city, early Christmas morning.

Knox was arrested by Sheriff Ohmer Tate, who said the driver was in possession of three quarts of wine, one quart of gin, two pints of whiskey and a Colt .38 caliber pistol.

Knox appeared before R. O. Copesey, Xenia Twp. justice of the peace, furnished $1,000 appearance bond and was released Sunday night. He waived his right to trial in another court and his hearing before the magistrate will take place Monday.

Knox, driving east, it is alleged on the wrong side of the road, crashed head-on into an auto being driven toward Xenia by William Cash. Cash was driving Mrs. John Baber and her four children, Jackson Road, to this city, where the children expected to attend the Christmas party of the Xenia lodge of Elks Christmas morning.

Two of the four children, Sheriff Tate learned, were tossed through the windshield of the car and hurt. The eldest child, John, Jr., 12, was cut about the head and a 7-year old boy was bruised about the knees.

Two other children, a boy and a girl, were not injured. Mrs. Lizzie Baber, their mother, suffered bruises and Cash was also bruised about the chest. They were brought to Xenia and treated by Dr. H. R. Hawkins.

Knox was bruised and a companion whose name authorities did not disclose, escaped unhurt.

Cash told Sheriff Tate he had swerved almost entirely off the improved part of the highway in a futile effort to avert an accident.

Knox faces possible charges of carrying concealed weapons, driving an auto while intoxicated, transporting liquor and reckless driving.

Farmer kills self Christmas night; was despondent

Wayne Jefferis, 45, farmer, shot and killed himself at his home three miles north of Wilmington Christmas night. Despondency because of two months' illness is ascribed by relatives as a motive for the act.

Jefferis and his wife had spent Christmas day visiting Mrs. Jefferis' relatives in Bowersville. Upon returning home, Jefferis failed to enter the house with his wife.

Becoming alarmed when he did not appear, she began a search for him and found him lying on top of a wagon load of corn fodder which had been drawn into the barn.

He shot himself with a shotgun, the charge penetrating his heart. Surviving besides his widow, Elizabeth, is a nine-month-old baby, one brother, J. J. Jefferis, assistant postmaster of Wilmington, his mother-in-law and father-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ott Tobin and his sister-in-law, Miss Frances Tobin, all of Bowersville. His widow was before marriage Miss Elizabeth Tobin, who at one time taught school in Xenia.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. THOMAS M'CANN

Mrs. Thomas M'Cann, 47, died at a local hospital Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Mrs. M'Cann underwent a serious operation at the hospital three weeks ago, and never recuperated properly from the ordeal.

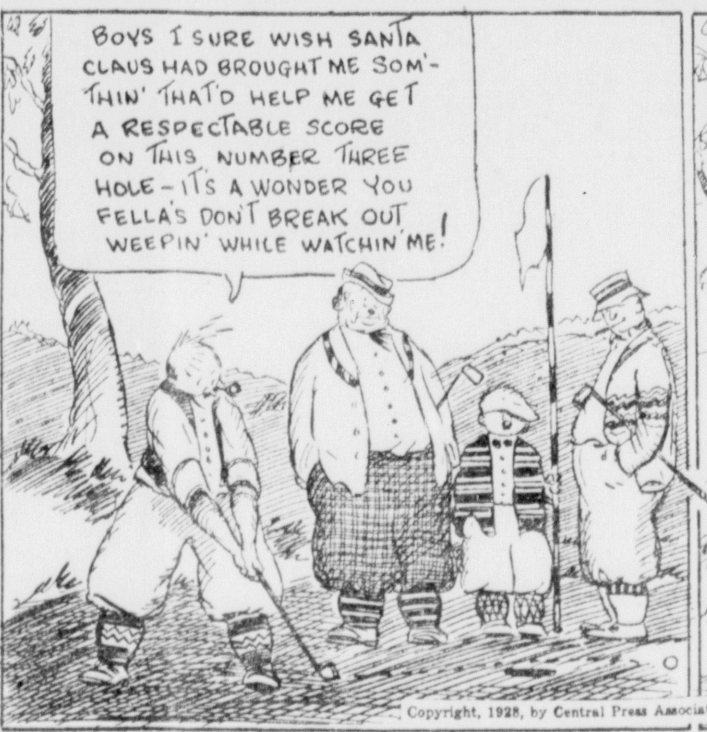

She was born in Xenia, and spent her entire life in this city. Besides her husband, who is conductor on the Dayton and Xenia traction line, two brothers, John Coates, Miami-burg, O., Harvey C. Coates and one sister, Mrs. Della Berry, this city, survive.

Mrs. M'Cann was a member of St. Brigid Catholic Church. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

QUIET CHRISTMAS FOR XENIA POLICE

Christmas passed quietly for police, according to Police Chief M. E. Graham, who announced that no arrests were made and few complaints were received. Christmas cheer was apparently lacking. Xenians did not have the where-withal to make "whoopie," and as a result the city was dryer than usual, the chief declared.

THE MEADOWLARKS—Helpful Hints for the Hopeless

Annual Sport Review-1928

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Sports Writer for Central Press and Gazette

The opening of the major and minor league baseball seasons generally took the play away from all other sports in April, although tasty dishes were offered in half a dozen other branches of sport in the leap-year month.

Had the big league fans but known the results of the opening games in both leagues furnished a true tip-off on what to expect for the season. The New York Yankees and Athletics drew the spotlight in the American League and the Yankees proceeded to trounce the man on whom Connie Mack was leaning to check the Huguenots through the 1928 campaign—Lefty Grove. Huggins' crew won the opener, 8 to 3, this without the aid of any homers from the bats of Babe Ruth or Lou Gehrig.

The St. Louis Cardinals opened up with a 14 to 7 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. The boys could have called it a season right there, as far as the outcome was concerned. Such a procedure would have separated the moguls from the usual revenue, however.

Looming next in importance was the signing of Gene Tunney for another appearance as heavyweight champion—an appearance which was destined to be his last (considering his present retirement permanent). Tom Heeney, rugged, courageous fellow from New Zealand, was given the plum—mainly because of the possibilities for weaving color and romance about him—to fatten the gate.

Almost coincident with the selection of the date for the Tunney-Heeney battle came the news that Jack Dempsey had scored a court knockout in his fight to prevent Jack Kearns, his former manager, from collecting $700,000 when Kearns asserted was due him for his managerial services over a three-year period despite the fact that the two Jacks had agreed to disagree.

While not seeking to detract from Dempsey's greatness as a fighter, the fair-minded section of the ring public has always felt that it was the split between the two Jacks that brought Dempsey to the end of the championship trail with such suddenness that night in Philadelphia. Not only was Kearns' astuteness as a manager sadly lacking in Dempsey's training camp and corner, but the former pilot heckled Dempsey with various court actions and well-timed verbal barbs.

Chronologically the events for the month ran as follows:
APRIL 5—Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City, won the north and south women's golf tourney at Pinehurst, defeating the sensational Virginia Van Wie, 6 and 5.

APRIL 7—Rickard named the Tunney-Heeney fight date, which was later changed.
APRIL 11—Major league seasons opened with the main results those chronicled above.

APRIL 14—Johnny Layton regained his national three-cushion billiard title in a championship match in Chicago, defeating Willie Hoppe in the final match.

APRIL 15—The Nationals of New York won the national soccer title by defeating the Chicago Bricklayers, 3 to 0, at Chicago. The teams had played to a 1 to 1 tie the week previously in Cleveland, O., two overtime periods failing to bring a score by either team. The final game was marred by riots.

APRIL 20—Lefty Grove gave the Philadelphia Athletics new life when he tossed the N. Y. Yankees 2 to 1 in the opener at New York, allowing the team five hits and holding Ruth hitless and Gehrig to one single. The two old vets, Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb, clinched the game for the Mackmen with their timely hitting.

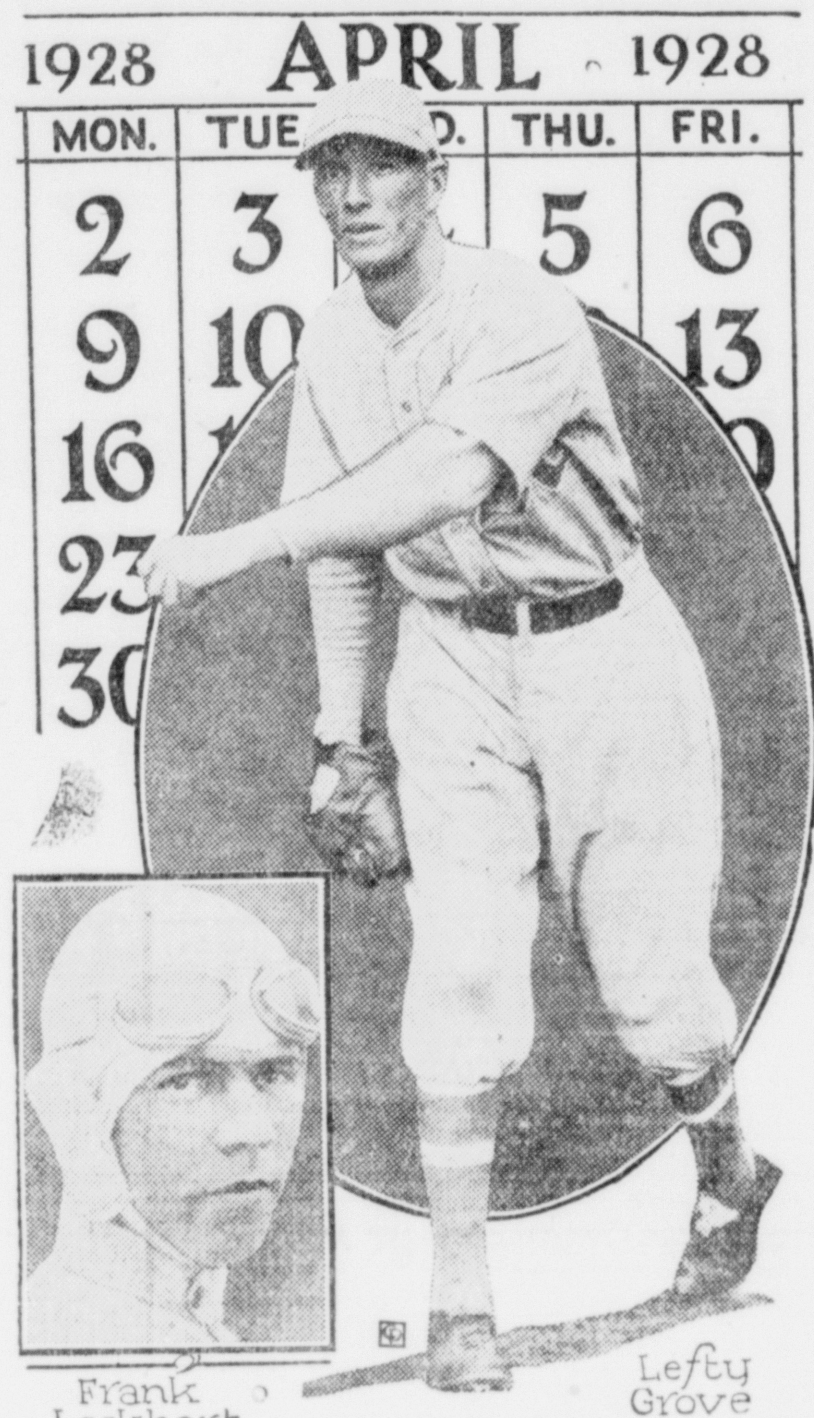

Eppa Rixey, of the Cincinnati Reds, shut out the Chicago Cubs the same afternoon with four hits.

APRIL 21—Babe Walberg sent Athletic boosters into a frenzy of delight by shutting out the Yankees, 10 to 0, allowing six hits and collecting a homer and two singles himself. Vic Aldridge, recently traded to the Giants by the Pirates, was suspended by John McGraw for failure to come to terms. Had McGraw known how much help Aldridge was to prove to the team the Giant boss would have paid him to stay out of the cold.

APRIL 23—Pete Latzo, former welterweight champion, made his debut as a light heavyweight and defeated Tony Marullo in 10 rounds in a New York ring.

APRIL 24—Babe Ruth enjoyed his biggest day of the season, up to the date mentioned, by socking two home runs off Horace Lisenbee, of the Washington Senators.

A New York He had collected one in previous games.
APRIL 25—Frank Lockhart, intrepid auto racer of international fame, was killed when a tire of his car exploded and hurled the machine into space as he was attempting to set a new world's speed record at Daytona Beach.

APRIL 27—Walter Hagen took one of the worst drubbings of his golfing career in losing the first half of a 72-hole match with Archie Compston, British pro, at Merfordshire, England. Hagen being 14 down at the end of 36 holes. He lost the match 18 and 17 the next day.

APRIL 28—Charlie Paddock, still called the world's fastest human, set a new world's record for the 175-yard distance, of 17 2-5 seconds, at Penn relay carnival at Philadelphia. He narrowly escaped serious injury, as a portion of the stand collapsed along the course when the crowd leaned forward to watch him. Lee Barnes set a new world's record for the pole vault the same day. In the west coast games at Fresno, Cal., by vaulting 14 feet 1 3-4 inches. The mark was one-quarter of an inch above Sabin Carr's record. John Kuck, later to star in the Olympics, set a new world's record for the shotput of 51 feet 1 1-2 inch, which was just that fraction of an inch better than Ralph Rose's record, made in 1909.

Who's Who and Timely Views

UNPRECEDENTED WAVE OF SPECULATION ACTIVITY NOTED

By ANDREW MELLON
Secretary of the Treasury
(Andrew William Mellon was born at Pittsburgh, Pa., March 24, 1855. He was educated at the Western University of Pennsylvania (now University of Pittsburgh). He was president of the Mellon National Bank at Pittsburgh, retiring in 1921 to accept the office of secretary of the treasury which he has since held. He is a director or officer of various financial and industrial corporations and has also been engaged in development of coal, coke and iron enterprises. He is chairman of several federal boards.)

A physical volume of industrial production equivalent to that of the fiscal year 1927 together with a unprecedented wave of speculation activity, higher money rates and a decline in the country's stock of gold of about $500,000,000 stand out as the most important economic and financial developments of the last twelve-month period.

The department of the treasury has found it increasingly necessary to study business and financial conditions generally and the welfare of the federal government, since the government's revenues are now closely linked with the success of business through the policy of income taxation.

There now is an intimate connection between the treasury and the money market as a result of public debt operations of the government which require accurate analysis of the financial situations from time to time.

The federal reserve banks favored easier money during the summer and early fall of 1927, because it was believed easier money here would help the weak exchange rates and avoid the necessity of higher rates abroad. This result was likely to help world trade, in the view of the board.

It later became apparent that the ends sought by the earlier policy had been accomplished, but that speculation was growing as another effect. The policy consequently was reversed.

As the next expedient the federal reserve banks began selling securities in the open market. Even in this course, did not offset the speculative activity of "a powerful group of speculators." The public "in general" had been buying and acted as if the price of securities would indefinitely advance.

CATHOLICS ATTEND EARLY MASSES HERE ON CHRISTMAS DAY

Worshippers filled St. Brigid Catholic Church at 5 o'clock Christmas morning for the first of four masses celebrating the birth of the Saviour.

The Rev. David Powers, pastor, was celebrant of the high mass at which the alumni choir sang a special mass with solo parts taken by Miss Eleanor McDonnell. Preceding the mass the choir sang "Silent Night" and the offertory, "Adagio Fiolis." Miss McDonnell sang "With Glory Lift the Midnight Air" as the congregation retired from the church at the close of the service.

The Rev. Father Powers preached briefly on the gospel of the day which told the story of the birth of Christ in Bethlehem. Low masses were celebrated at 7 and 8 o'clock and another high mass was sung at 9:30 o'clock Christmas morning, with the children's choir singing. Miss McDonnell, again the soloist, sang the solo "The Birthday of the King" at the 9:30 service.

INFLUENZA HURTS PHONE SERVICE

One third of the exchange operators of the Xenia branch of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. were confined to their homes by severe colds or grip Monday, according to H. W. Cleaver, commercial manager, who asks that patrons of the service exercise patience if there is any unusual delay in putting through phone calls for the next few days.

Mr. Cleaver announced that seven out of the twenty-two available operators failed to report Monday because of illness and that the number of girls on the sick list has been increasing daily.

Because of the limited number of operators Mr. Cleaver asks that phone users overlook any less of fidelity in putting through calls.

Lefty Grove, Athletic pitcher, struck out 183 batters in the 1928 season.

Babe Ruth finds the Chicago American baseball field the most difficult on which to hit home runs.

Pat Haley, former Philadelphia National player, may land at the helm of the Wheeling, Middle Atlantic league club.

Al Tyson, who broke a leg while playing with the Brooklyn Robins, has been sold back to the Buffalo International league club.

Fait Elkins, all-around Indian athlete, has signed a contract with the Rochester Internationals. Elkins was a football and track hero at the University of Nebraska.

HURT IN ACCIDENT

Edward McCormick, this city, is in a hospital in Miami, Fla., with a broken bone in his neck, received in an auto accident near that city two weeks ago. McCormick was accompanied by Robert Fox, Clarence Milburn and Loyd Jones, all of Xenia, at the time of the accident, but the other three men were not injured. McCormick is slowly recovering, according to word received here.

SHERIFF IS SANTA TO JAIL PRISONERS

Twenty-one prisoners in the County Jail enjoyed a chicken dinner at the expense of Sheriff Obermeyer at noon Christmas day. This marked a departure from the annual custom since heretofore Christmas pork had always headed the roast for jail men.

Sheriff Tate paid the bill out of his own pocket since a new law requires sheriffs to feed prisoners.

Mrs. Tate, who acts as matron of the jail, further brightened the occasion for the inmates by presenting each with a box of candy.

CHRISTMAS CHEER

County authorities instead of Santa Claus visited the home of Arthur Webb, Jasper Station, Christmas eve and Webb is under arrest in the County Jail facing a probable charge of possessing liquor. He will be arraigned Wednesday in Probate Court. The raid was productive of a small quantity of liquor intended for Christmas cheer.

XENIA WATER PLANT NETTED $16,996.08

Xenia's municipally-owned waterworks plant showed a net profit of $16,996.08 in 1927, according to official statistics just issued.

It is pointed out that the intent in establishing municipally-owned public utilities is to furnish water and light to the inhabitants of the city at cost. The earnings depend upon the rate charged. Natural conditions and free services have considerable bearing upon the cost.

Total gross expenditures of the waterworks plant last year amounted to $29,170.37 while receipts from the sale of water aggregated $46,166.45. New construction and equipment cost $5,823.40 and the operation and maintenance cost was $23,346.97, accounting for the expenditures.

FORMER XENIAN IS CLAIMED BY DEATH

Mrs. Isabelle Doron, 60, wife of J. E. Doron, Dayton, formerly of this city, was found dead at her home, 1305 W. Fifth St., that city, Monday afternoon.

Besides her husband, two brothers residing in Santa Rosa survive. Funeral services were held at the Second Funeral Parlors, W. Main St., Wednesday at 2 o'clock with burial in Woodland Cemetery.

CAKE EATER COPS

Members of the Police Department were remembered Christmas eve with a cake, gift of George Swartz, Court House janitor. It looked like cake, tasted like cake and upon consumption was discovered to be cake. Swartz left only one thing unexplained whether he had baked it himself.

The cake was sliced Christmas eve and Police Chief M. E. Graham, who went to Columbus that night, missed out on the party. Like Old Mother Hubbard, Chief Graham upon his return went to the basket and found it was bare.

LET'S LIVE! MILDRED LAMB

© 1928, CENTRAL PRESS ASS'N INC.

READ THIS FIRST:
Through the loom of every marriage, there run many threads, gay and dark, and it depends upon the dexterity of the weavers, whether the pattern will be bright and cheerful or dark and threatening.

When Byrd married Larry, she had only known the sheltered life of a small town, but moved to Cleveland, she was soon hurled into the modern vortex that sucks at the youth of the city, whirling them about in the mad waters of extravagance, get-rich-quick business and soft living.

From the very beginning, Byrd began to struggle against the influences that were threatening her handsome, magnetic, speed-loving husband, influences which threatened to undermine his reputation and career, her own ambitions for a home and children and, lastly, the very foundations of their marriage.

For the elements that were combining against Byrd's happiness were many: Larry's partnership with unscrupulous Jack Duncan in a speculative scheme, flouting the stock of the Builders' Supply company; Larry's continual loans from Byrd's father, who was president of a bank; the succession of parties with a fast moving crowd, consisting of Tiny and Fred Oberman, Jack and Margy Duncan, Chet Everson and India Campbell.

Larry's refusal to break off his friendship with India, his growing extravagance; the increasing difference over bills, and economies which couldn't pay for the week's grocery bill but could afford a case of Scotch; and finally, the further rupture caused by Pat's visit. Byrd's young sister, who should have had a firm and disciplinary hand.

Pat had misinterpreted several scenes which she had witnessed, and was beginning to think that Byrd had changed into a gay vamp. She didn't know that Byrd was bothered by Jack, who attempted to make love to her and cunningly took advantage of his association with Larry to further his affair with her.

Now that Chet's friendly interest was Byrd's only help and protection in a situation that might soon destroy Larry's business and his good name.

Appealing to Pat's sense of loyalty, Byrd recovered some of Pat's confidence and depended upon events to break up their friendship with India.

One evening when Chet had brought a friend out to the apartment to meet Pat, who had arrived uninvited, became sulky because of lack of attention and walked out of the apartment.

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER XXXII
"What you need is fresh air!" he retorted impatiently.

With a frown and a jerk, India went to the telephone and called a taxi, and with another jerk and a slam she went into the bedroom and put on her hat. Without a word she slammed the door behind her as she left.

There was a startled silence in the room.

"We'll pay for this," said Byrd ruefully.

Pat and "this here Eddie," as Pat began to call him, were out every night. A movie, a dance, a dinner at a road house. Byrd was beside herself thinking about it.

At first she had really revenged her, then she had scolded her, threatening again and again to send her home. Nothing had any effect on Pat. Nothing whatsoever!

Byrd longed to discuss the whole situation with Larry. When he saw how frivolous Pat was getting to be, he'd surely help to straighten out this kink-headed sister of hers.

Finally one Saturday morning, after he'd been gone two weeks, Byrd got a wire to meet him at the station.

"We're going to kill the fatted calf," she said, happily, to Pat. "Larry'll be home in time for dinner tonight." Her eyes shone like star sapphires.

She put in an extra long order at the grocer's and the butcher's. Then she washed her hair and waved it with water combs and spent more time than she had in weeks on "make-up." She looked like a little mauve flower with a deep blue center and a bright spot of color in each cheek-petal as she started the car toward the Big Four station.

She soared above the shabby suit she wore, for she warmed only to the thought of Larry. She always felt a warm thrilling sensation through her veins when Larry had been away only a day, but often it was followed by a sudden shuddering suspicion that still gripped her when she thought of the night they were married. She always pretended to Larry that she had forgotten that incident, since he never so much as alluded to it. And she would die before she would ask for the truth.

But there it was, a dull ember, steadily burning in the heart of her.

She hurried along the track, and saw Larry's head and shoulders above the crowd. He waved exuberantly at her, and then seized her in both arms and kissed her. Byrd stared at Larry with wide eyes. He had on a new light overcoat, a new hat and a new suit. In fact, he looked the smartest dressed man anywhere about.

With his tanned, good looking features, he looked like an ad in "Vogue."

"I've put the Builders' Supply on Wall street," he said, with a look of happy pride. "I'm fairly dripping with greenbacks."

He continued to grin happily at Byrd. There was no doubt that he was glad to see her.

"Sweet baby! How'll we celebrate tonight!"

When they got to the apartment he told Pat and Byrd all the details. The farmers and small-town merchants were buying it, in small quantities, to be sure, but it was catching fire.

The famous bottles out of the closet cupboard, which had been locked up so long, made their appearance.

"Pat doesn't drink," said Byrd, in a small voice, scared that she might precipitate one of Larry's sudden stormy moods.

"We'll ask Pat," laughed Larry. Pat crinkled her nose, splashed so faintly with golden freckles, at Larry, and then gave him a sudden mischievous wink. So Pat had had visit. Byrd's young sister, who should have had a firm and disciplinary hand.

Pat had misinterpreted several scenes which she had witnessed, and was beginning to think that Byrd had changed into a gay vamp. She didn't know that Byrd was bothered by Jack, who attempted to make love to her and cunningly took advantage of his association with Larry to further his affair with her.

Now that Chet's friendly interest was Byrd's only help and protection in a situation that might soon destroy Larry's business and his good name.

Appealing to Pat's sense of loyalty, Byrd recovered some of Pat's confidence and depended upon events to break up their friendship with India.

One evening when Chet had brought a friend out to the apartment to meet Pat, who had arrived uninvited, became sulky because of lack of attention and walked out of the apartment.

CAKE EATER COPS

Members of the Police Department were remembered Christmas eve with a cake, gift of George Swartz, Court House janitor. It looked like cake, tasted like cake and upon consumption was discovered to be cake. Swartz left only one thing unexplained whether he had baked it himself.

The cake was sliced Christmas eve and Police Chief M. E. Graham, who went to Columbus that night, missed out on the party. Like Old Mother Hubbard, Chief Graham upon his return went to the basket and found it was bare.

LET'S LIVE! MILDRED LAMB INC.

READ THIS FIRST:

Through the loom of every marriage, there run many threads, gay and dark, and it depends upon the dexterity of the weaver, whether the pattern will be bright and cheerful or dark and threatening.

When Byrd married Larry Browning, she had only known the sheltered life of a small town, but moving to Cleveland, she was soon hurled into the modern vortex that sucks at the youth of the city, whirling them about in the mad waters of extravagance, get-rich-quick business and soft living.

From the very beginning, Byrd began to struggle against the influences that were threatening her handsome, magnetic, speed-loving husband, influences which threatened to undermine his reputation and career, her own ambitions for a home and children and, lastly, the very foundations of their marriage.

For the elements that were combining against Byrd's happiness were many: Larry's partnership with unscrupulous Jack Duncan in a speculative scheme, floating the stock of the Builders' Supply company; Larry's continual loans from Byrd's father, who was president of a bank; the succession of parties with a fast moving crowd, consisting of Tiny and Fred Oberman, Jack and Margy Duncan, Chet Everson and India Campbell, a former sweetheart of Larry's; Larry's refusal to break off his friendship with India, his growing extravagance; the increasing difference over bills, and economies which couldn't pay for the week's grocery bill but could afford a case of Scotch; and finally, the further rupture caused by Pat's visit, Byrd's young sister, who should have had a firm and disciplinary hand.

Pat had misinterpreted several scenes which she had witnessed, and was beginning to think that Byrd had changed into a gay vampire. She didn't know that Byrd was bothered by Jack, who attempted to make love to her and cunningly took advantage of his association with Larry to further his affair with her. Nor that Chet's friendly interest was Byrd's only help and protection in a situation that might soon destroy Larry's business and his good name.

Appealing to Pat's sense of loyalty, Byrd recovered some of Pat's confidence and depended upon events to break up their friendship with India. One evening when Chet had brought a friend into the apartment to meet Pat, India, who had arrived uninvited, became sulky because of lack of attention and walked out of the apartment.

"What you need is a fresh air!" he retorted impatiently. "With a frown and a jerk, India went to the telephone and called a taxi, and with another jerk and a slam she went into the bedroom and put on her hat. Without a word she slammed the door behind her as she left."

There was a startled silence in the room.

"We'll pay for this," said Byrd ruefully.

Pat and "this here Eddie," as Pat began to call him, were out every night. A movie, a dance, a dinner at a road house. Byrd was beside herself thinking about it. At first she had mildly reprimanded her, then she had scolded her, threatening again and again to send her home. Nothing had any effect on Pat. Nothing whatsoever!

Byrd longed to discuss the whole situation with Larry. When he saw how frivolous Pat was getting to be, he'd surely help to straighten out this kink-headed sister of hers.

Finally one Saturday morning, after he'd been gone two weeks, Byrd got a wire to meet him at the station.

"We're going to kill the fatted calf," she said, happily, to Pat. "Larry'll be home in time for dinner tonight." Her eyes shone like star sapphires.

She put in an extra long order at the grocer's and the butcher's. Then she washed her hair and waved it with water combs and spent more time than she had in weeks on "make-up." She looked like a little mauve flower with a deep blue center and a bright glow of color in each cheek-petal as she started the car toward the Big Four station.

She soared above the shabby suit she wore, for she warmed only to the thought of Larry. She always felt a warm trickling sensation through her veins when Larry had been away only a day, but often it was followed by a sudden slandering suspicion that still gripped her when she thought of the night they were married. She always pretended to Larry that she had forgotten that incident, since he never so much as alluded to it. And she would die before she would ask for the truth.

But there it was, a dull ember, steadily burning in the heart of her.

She hurried along the track, and saw Larry's head and shoulders above the crowd. He waved exuberantly at her, and then seized her in both arms and kissed her. Byrd stared at Larry with wide eyes. He had on a new light overcoat, a new hat and a new suit. In fact, he looked the smartest dressed man anywhere about.

With his tanned, good looking features, he looked like an ad in "Vogue."

"I've put the Builders' Supply on Wall street," he said, with a look of happy pride. "I'm fairly dripping with greenbacks."

He continued to grin happily at Byrd. There was no doubt that he was glad to see her.

"Sweet baby! How'll we celebrate tonight?"

When they got to the apartment he told Pat and Byrd all the details. The farmers and small town merchants were buying it in small quantities, to be sure, but it was catching fire.

The famous bottles out of the closet cupboard, which had been locked up so long, made their appearance.

"Pat doesn't drink," said Byrd, in a small voice, scared that she might precipitate one of Larry's sudden stormy moods.

"We'll ask Pat," laughed Larry. Pat crinkled her nose, splashed so faintly with golden freckles, at Larry, and then gave him a sudden mischievous wink. So Pat had had two cocktails. Then she became very talkative and told Larry, glowingly, what she had been doing during his absence, and he seemed very much amused at her story of Eddie. And she told Larry about the dancing lessons.

"I've used up two month's allowance already," she laughed, with a shrug of the shoulders. "Those dancing lessons left an awful hole. Would you let me have a little money until I get my next pay envelope?" Then she let her voice quaver in a tremulous intonation of a sob. "Help a poor, little girl keep the wool off from the door!"

Byrd couldn't believe that Pat was actually asking Larry for money! If he encouraged her extravagance, she'd never catch up. She was about to interfere when she remembered that she had taken fifty dollars from Pat herself with which to pay Chet.

Pat took the one hundred dollars that Larry counted out for her with a giggle, and stuck the roll into her rolled stocking.

"Isn't it?" she held up a warning finger. "The bold, bad wool-off has stopped gnawing! He promised to be good, and said he wouldn't gnaw or glean any more!"

Pat pronounced it "gnarl" and "glear."

Stimulated by the cocktails she had had, Pat was crazier than ever. She certainly was whimsical and funny all the time, but with the help of what she had had to drink, she was more and more romping and boisterous.

Suddenly Pat remembered that she was going to have dinner with Eddie.

Byrd decided that there was a chance for Larry to put his foot down. Pat hopped up and dashed for the bedroom, scurrying around like a bewildered robin, looking for her clothes.

"Pat's been out every night for a week, hand running, with this Eddie," she said, to Byrd. "Why don't you tell her to stay home to night. After dinner, we could go to the theater or to a movie."

Before Larry could answer, Pat appeared in her new evening dress, wearing Byrd's evening coat.

"People never wear evening clothes to a place like Dreamland," objected Byrd. "And anyway, Larry thinks—" Byrd looked at Larry to go on.

But Pat couldn't wait that long. "Isn't, darlin'!" Pat began, with just a tiny suspicion of thickness of the tongue, and sidling up to Larry with arms stealing coaxing around his neck, "you wouldn't care if Eddie and me took the buggy tonight, would you? You see, Eddie's just out of a car. He's trying to decide whether he'd buy a Rolls Royce or a Mercedes." Pat whooped at her own wit.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," Larry said, with a sudden bright thought, "we'll take this here Eddie and we'll all go somewhere for dinner and dance. Any place you say, Pat!"

Pat whirled around the room slandering suspicion that still gripped her when she thought of the night they were married. She always pretended to Larry that she had forgotten that incident, since he never so much as alluded to it. And she would die before she would ask for the truth.

But there it was, a dull ember, steadily burning in the heart of her.

Poems that Live

AD MATREM

OF ten in the after days, when thou and I
Have fallen from the scope of human view,
When, both together, under the sweet sky,
We sleep beneath the daisies and the dew,
Men will recall thy gracious presence bland,
Conning the pictured sweetness of thy face;
Will pore o'er paintings by the plastic hand,
And vaunt thy skill and tell thy deeds of grace.
Oh, may they, then, who crown thee with true bays,
Saying, "What love unto her son she bore!"
Make this addition to thy perfect praise,
"Nor ever yet was mother worshiped more!"
So shall I live with Thee, and thy dear fame
Shall link my love unto thine honored name.

—Julian Fane (1527-1570)

TURLEY GLAZE GETS FINE AND SENTENCE ON LARCENY CHARGE

Pleading guilty to an indictment for petit larceny, Turley Glaze, 50, farm hand, charged with the theft of fourteen chickens valued at $20 from a looked barn on the farm of Charles C. Thomas, Wilmington Pike, November 15, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to thirty days in the Cincinnati workhouse by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy Saturday.

A second indictment for burglary and larceny against Glaze returned in connection with the same case, was dismissed with the consent of Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall. Glaze had agreed to plead guilty to the lesser charge on condition the second indictment was nolle.

Thomas captured Glaze single-handed, stumbling over a sack in the darkness as he started across the fields shortly after midnight on a hunting excursion. Thomas searched the bag and found it contained chickens. Investigating further, he surprised Glaze and an unidentified companion preparing to leave in an auto. He covered Glaze with a borrowed shotgun until deputies of the sheriff's office arrived, but Glaze's companion jumped out of the car and escaped. He is still at large.

KONJOLA ROUTS SUFFERINGS OF FIFTEEN YEARS!

"Certainly a Super-Medicine," Says Osborn Man Who Had Serious Complication

Case after case of Konjola's triumphs proves that this new medicine is matchless in principle, for afflictions that have held away for years and years vanish before the almost magic power of this master-medicine of thirty-two ingredients, twenty-two of which are the juices of roots and herbs.

All seekers after health can learn about the marvelous action of this wondrous remedy at the Gallaher Drug Store, 33 E. Main St., Xenia. Here you will not be told of promises or claims, but shown exactly what Konjola has done in thousands of cases. Results are the real test of everything, whether it be a medicine, an airplane, or a pin. Take the case of Mr. James Lewis, of Osborn, near Xenia, who was ill with a complication of diseases for fifteen years. In all that time medicine after medicine failed to do him the least good, and he was a discouraged man when, at last, he turned to Konjola for relief. But read his own words, as he related his experience the other day.

"Konjola is, as many call it, a super-medicine; it certainly proved that in my case. For fifteen years I suffered from stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles, and, try as I might, nothing helped me a particle. My stomach was so weak that practically nothing agreed with me. What I could manage to eat was only partially digested, and after every meal I would spit up bits of undigested food. My kidneys forced me to get up many times at night, and caused stabbing pains through my back. I was nervous, bilious and constantly suffered from terrific headaches. My wife, who had taken Konjola with splendid results, insisted that it would solve all my health troubles, and fortunately I listened to her advice.

"The wonders that five bottles of this amazing medicine worked in my case are beyond words. Day by day I could feel my troubles getting less and less, and in five weeks my digestion was restored, the kidneys were cleansed, stimulated and given new life, and the pains went away. The bowels yielded first, and for the first time in fifteen years I did not need a laxative. Then, too, I am filled with new life and energy. I feel like my entire inner system had been rebuilt. No other medicine ever even started to help me. No words of mine could be a strong enough endorsement of this marvelous compound."

Thus Konjola works, scoring success after success where all else has failed. Konjola has the principle of the perfect medicine—it goes after the cause—not the result—of the disease. Results are quick, thorough and lasting. Konjola is sold in Xenia at the Gallaher Drug Store 33 E. Main St., and by all the leading druggists throughout this entire section.
